Snow Strikes East

Railroad Blocked, Phone Lines Fall

From CP and UP Dispatches

Interior B.C. settlements were still digging out early today after the worst snowstorm of the winter smashed telephone lines, blocked railway tracks and piled drifts more than 18 feet in height at some points.

The storm struck simultaneously with heavy blasts in Eastern Canada and across the Atlantic where the first big tide of the year swept against lowland sea walls and pounding seas brought a flurry of distress calls from European shipping.

At least one life was lost in the eastern storm, that of Mrs. Louis Desrosiers, 70, of Montreal, who died in a two-car collision.

SETTLEMENTS BURIED

Some settlements in the Coquihalla Pass area of B.C. were all but buried by the heavy snows.

Canadian Pacific Railway crews worked around the clock to clear tracks through the pass for Kettle Valley trains, but new snow continued to block the line yesterday.

Housekeepers and storekeepers in the storm zone were digging their way out of snow that sometimes reached the eaves.

Meanwhile in the Allison Pass district B.C. Telephone linemen were plowing through drifts to repair broken lines. Trains were being rerouted for the Kettle Valley through Spence's Bridge.

Hard-pressed snow plows could keep a single line open along parts of the Allison Pass highway.

Montreal was hardest hit in the east. Almost 10 inches of snow fell on the city and district. Traffic was disrupted while more than 2,500 men and 700 pieces of equipment fought the storm, fanned by a 15-mile-an-hour wind.

Traffic was reported moving normally again today, however.

In Ontario four inches of snow fell while the Maritimes reported nine inches.

Overseas, a slackening in North Sea gales spared the beleagured European coast from floods like those that killed 2,000 persons a year ago.

Nevertheless strong winds piled water two feet above normal level yesterday and a further onslaught was due Saturday when the first of the spring tides will test reinforced dike defenses.

British Air Ministry forecasters said there was no indication of dangerous winds in the 12 hours beginning last midnight but future conditions appeared unsettled.

Old Order Changed for Matelots

Modern sailors at HMCS Naden no longer sling hammocks over mess tables. Sleeping and eating quarters are separate in the new barracks building and sailors, in groups of four, sleep in single beds in separate cabins. The rooms are equipped with rugs and lockers and sailors can install their own radios if they wish. Shown above relaxing in one of the cabins are Ordinary Seaman R. Parkinson, Vancouver, and Ordinary Seaman A. Stratychuk, Yorkton, Sask.

Tax on Drinks May End When Legislature Meets

PGE To Grow Both Ways, Gunderson To Go, Bennett Indicates on Return from Trip to East

BY T. A. MYERS
Colonist Legislative Reporter

British Columbia's 10-per-cent luxury tax on drinks may be repealed at the coming session of the legislature, Premier W. A. C. Bennett indicated Thursday.

The premier also announced that the government's Pacific Great Eastern Railway will be extended in both directions, and indicated again that Finance Minister Einar Gunderson will resign from the cabinet next month.

Back in his office after a month-long absence, the premier told reporters of his recent trip to Ottawa and New York and his home-town holiday in Kelowna where, he bragged, he picked roses in January—"just like in the capital."

He confirmed Kelowna reports that he would ask the House to "take a new look" at the 10-per-cent tipplers' tax, imposed when the new Liquor Act was passed three months ago. The tax has brought complaints from veterans' clubs and other organizations which must charge the tax on their members' drinks.

"If a formula can't be found that works better than this one," Premier Bennett said, "then I will recommend to my colleagues that it be removed entirely."

Mr. Bennett added to reports that he was ready to go ahead with the southern extension to the PGE, from Squamish to North Vancouver.

He said he would recommend to the PGE board of directors, of which he is chairman, that a start be made on extending the line in both directions, with the northern extension from Prince George serving Fort St. John as well as Dawson Creek in the Peace River country.

The southern link would bring in no new business for the railway, he said, but "we must have a funnel ready to handle the increased traffic which will result when the northern extension is built."

He said he still looks for cooperation from the federal government in extending the line.

"I think there will be aid," he said. "The question is how much."

Reports from Ottawa have indicated the federal government has dropped Premier Bennett's ambitious plan for "joint investment" by the two governments in the PGE, major highways and forest protection into the wastebasket.

Mr. Bennett said, however, he did not consider these reports to be official. He would wait for a direct answer from Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent, he said.

The premier said he had been misinterpreted in a Kelowna speech in which he was reported to have indicated Finance Minister Gunderson would try to regain a seat in the legislature through a by-election.

"Mr. Gunderson's status is unchanged from the statement I made just before leaving for Ottawa," the premier said.

(At that time Mr. Bennett said the defeated finance minister had agreed to stay on until after the Ottawa trip and the spring estimates had been completed. This was taken to mean Mr. Gunderson would quit just before the spring session of the legislature.)

Date of the session has not yet been set, but will be soon, Mr. Bennett said. A likely date is February 16.

In New York, Mr. Bennett said, he and his colleagues had talked to three groups of investment bankers about the prospect for investment in B.C.

"I was greatly impressed by their knowledge of B.C. and the Peace River country," he said. "I found in New York more awareness of what is happening here than I found in Eastern Canada."

Bonner Silent On Plan

Education Minister Robert Bonner was non-commital Thursday about a Vancouver report that the Rolston Formula would be withheld for a year.

He declined to comment on the story which said the formula, named after the late Education Minister Tilly Rolston and planned to redistribute the burden of school taxation, would not be enacted at the coming session of the legislature.

The formula was first introduced in the spring of 1952. It was bitterly opposed by a majority opposition and led to the government's defeat.

Last official word on the subject was that the formula would be modified before being reintroduced.

The Vancouver report said it would be held off for a year's study.

Ordinary Seaman K. Flieger, Chatham, N.B., is shown above pressing his uniform with equipment provided in new barracks block at HMCS Naden. The building has the last word in facilities to help sailors look their best. There are two sets of laundries, drying rooms and pressing rooms on each deck of the three-deck building.

Lawyers Barred From Jail

Two Vancouver lawyers have been barred from visiting clients in Oakalla prison because of suspected trafficking in narcotics and liquor, the attorney-general's department announced Thursday.

Department officials said one lawyer was reported to have passed drugs to a prisoner and the other to have given liquor to another prisoner. Names of the lawyers were not disclosed pending completion of an investigation by the department.

The department said it had nothing to add to the bare announcement of the restriction placed on the lawyers.

Union To Meet On Gas Issue

VANCOUVER (CP) — A special meeting of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (AFL), Local 213, will be held Monday night to determine future action in the Gas Workers' protracted wage dispute with the B.C. Electric Co.

Old Salts' Eyes Would Pop At New Barracks Block

BY LAWRIE JOSLIN

You old salts who left the navy at the end of the Second World War would find your eyes blinking with amazement at the wonders of life beyond the wide glass doors of the handsome new barracks at HMCS Naden.

A group of newspaper and radio men toured the sprawling three-deck, steel and concrete structure yesterday, the guests of Cmdr. G. H. Davidson, executive officer of HMCS Naden; Lieut.-Cmdr. J. E. Korning, Naden first lieutenant, and Lieut.-Cmdr. Bruce McGregor, officer in charge of the block.

Navy men hesitate to call the hotel-like structure a barracks block. They'd rather call it a "living block" and, compared to the rigors of navy barracks life in the old days, the modern matelot is really living.

Life was never like this in "A" and "B" blocks, or "X" and "Y" blocks, still standing down the hill from the trim new building.

Instead of sleeping in hammocks slung over mess tables, these latter-day salts are sleeping four to a cabin in single beds equipped with such modern innovations as sheets and pillows.

These cabins are finished in a pastel shade of grey (public rooms are painted pastel green). Each man has a wall lamp at the head of his berth. He doesn't have to put his feet down on a cold deck, either, because there is a rug beside every berth. Each cabin holds four generous-sized lockers, fitted with a chest of drawers and space for hanging gear. Each man may have a radio beside his bed if he wishes.

The modern sailor doesn't have to remain cooped up with his cabin mates. He can stroll down the corridor to a comfortable lounge and read and write or just sit and relax. Within a few steps of his cabin are laundry facilities of the latest design which he can use to wash, dry and press his clothes in a twinkling.

In the basement of the building are a tailor shop, a barber shop, a games room and a baggage room where individual gear not in use can be checked. Also

Conductors Change Union

MONTREAL (CP) — A majority of 2,000 Canadian National Railways conductors have rejected their present union, the Order of Railways Conductors, in favor of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, it was announced Thursday night.

A. J. Kelly of Ottawa, international vice-president and Canadian head of the brotherhood, said he understands the brotherhood has won a representation vote in both eastern and western Canada, although no figures of the count are available. The count was held Thursday in Ottawa by the national labor relations board.

The labor relations board authorized the vote last fall when the brotherhood claimed it had a majority of CNR conductors.

Technician's Death Creates Mystery

TORONTO (CP) — Helen Boyle, 24-year-old hospital technician found unconscious on a laboratory floor Wednesday night, died Thursday night of skull fractures.

Police said it may never be known whether she was injured in a fall or was slugged by a prowler.

She died without regaining consciousness about 24 hours after she was found in the darkened laboratory at St. Michael's Hospital. Two emergency brain operations were performed in a vain effort to save her life.

The theory that she slipped and struck her head on a protruding table edge gained ground, although police continued to give some consideration to the theory she could have been struck from behind by a prowler.

Doctors and detectives said the fracture of her temple corresponds in size and shape to the corner of the table. Doctors said a fracture at the back of her head is of the type often caused by a backward fall to a hard floor.

Faith Healers Dead 200 Years Treated Wife, Doctor Asserts

VANCOUVER (CP) — Doctors, some living and others "dead 200 years," figured in evidence being compiled by two law enforcement bodies Thursday.

The probe was ordered by city police and the attorney-general's department after a coroner's jury labeled a Vancouver physician "guilty of gross negligence" in the death of his "soulmate" wife.

The jury said Dr. Raymond D. Rush failed to provide "proper hospital and medical care" for his spiritualist wife in the final hours of her life, November 30.

Mrs. Margaret Rush, 39, died of natural causes: "The result of ulcerated colitis with terminal aspiration of stomach contents while in a coma," the jury found.

At the inquest, Dr. Thomas Dalrymple said he treated Mrs. Rush from 1949 to 1952. He said Dr. Rush told him his wife was receiving spiritualism in the form of faith-healing. She was being treated by three German doctors who had been "dead for 200 years," Dr. Dalrymple said Dr. Rush told him.

Five doctors, two insurance executives, an undertaker, the city analyst and two detectives testified.

Dr. T. R. Harmon said the dead woman's organs showed a large content of barbiturates. Dr. Rush was quoted as saying his wife fell down stairs and suffered a cerebral haemorrhage. Other doctors testified no sign of head injuries could be found.

The associates said they advised the doctor to get his wife into hospital at once. However, Dr. Rush refused to do so and asked his fellow doctors to sign a certificate of death before his wife died, listing cerebral haemorrhage as cause of death.

Dr. Rush was quoted by detective C. W. McKay as saying he knew his wife was going to die and refused because of religious beliefs to put her in hospital.

"We are soulmates," the doctor was quoted.

"When I told him his wife's body had been taken in for an autopsy . . . he pleaded that we wait at least 24 hours," Detective McKay said.

Asked for a reason, Dr. Rush was quoted:

"You wouldn't understand. We believe in spiritualism. My wife and I are soulmates."

Charge Reduced To Manslaughter

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP)—A murder charge against a 15-year-old boy, who admitted killing his father with a single punch when the parent came home drunk, was reduced to manslaughter at a preliminary hearing here Thursday.

Magistrate Lionel Beevor-Potts reduced the charge against Roy Milton Kenny after hearing the testimony of an RCMP constable who took the boy into custody.

The strapping, six-foot youth was charged with killing his father, George Kenny, 49, at their farm home at South Wellington near here December 16.

Const. George Phillips testified that the boy had told him: "I did it because he attacked me."

Under cross-examination, Phillips said he had known the elder Kenny for seven years to be "a man of violent temper."

A doctor testified that Kenny died from a broken neck, the result of one punch thrown by the son.

The boy is free on $10,000 bail.

Wire TV Planned For Alberni Area

PORT ALBERNI—Radio station CJAV announced this week that plans are under way for construction of a wired community television system in the Alberni Valley.

Ross McIntyre, chief engineer for the company, said that while engineering phases of the project are still being worked out it would seem that the community wired television system is quite feasible.

CJAV Ltd. has applied for and received licenses in both twin cities for the operation of the system and negotiations have now been entered with the B.C. Telephone Company for use of poles to carry television circuits.

This system will enable every home now reached by telephone lines in Alberni Valley, where this TV service is desired, to get good reception over a television set.

Index System Set For Garden Notes

Interest in gardening in Victoria where roses bloom in January and pansies nod their heads in the depth of winter is constant and intense.

This fact has been evidenced in dozens of ways, but particularly in the enthusiasm with which Colonist readers have received the column "Garden Notes" written by M. V. Chesnut.

Throughout 1953 Mr. Chesnut provided a wealth of information for garden lovers — both those who like to grow things and those who are content to just look and enjoy nature's beauties.

The writer of "Garden Notes" has received hundreds of letters praising his efforts and soliciting information on various aspects of plants and gardening. Many enthusiastic gardeners have carefully clipped his columns from day to day and saved them.

In this connection, Mr. Chesnut has received numerous requests to provide a system for indexing his writings. In appreciation of the popularity of his work during the past year, he agrees that an index system might prove useful and intends to do something about it.

Gardeners who wish to maintain a comprehensive file of "Garden Notes" are advised to clip Mr. Chesnut's columns daily and paste them in order of the date of their publication.

Once every three months in future Mr. Chesnut will provide an alphabetical index under which the various columns may be identified with the publication date.

Queen, Duke Ready To Commence Second Stage of Whistle-Stop Tour

PALMERSTON NORTH, N.Z. (Reuters) — The red and white train carrying Queen Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh leaves here today for the second stage of their whistle-stop tour of New Zealand's hinterland.

Five scheduled stops along the 160-mile route will give farmers and shepherds in remote inland villages a chance to repeat the welcome given the couple yesterday in their first venture away from the more populated areas.

The two-day train trip will end this afternoon at the west coast city of New Plymouth.

WELLINGTON NEXT

Saturday the Queen and Duke fly to Wellington for a week in the capital before going on to South Island.

Unscheduled stops caused by signal trouble stranded the Royal train miles from any settlement once yesterday.

A jammed stop signal along the single track line held up the eight-coach train for several minutes. Later there was another delay while railroad men searched for a hand signal dropped by the engineer.

CROWDS APPEAR

Crowds greeted the unexpected stop with cheers. The Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh smiled and waved back.

Other spectators welcomed them at four scheduled stops with speeches and presentations and lined the track in populated areas to cheer the train's passage.

Another departure from the official program came at the civic welcome opened by a speech from the mayor and a reply by the Queen.

TOO FAR AWAY

Six-year-old Robyn Tremaine, the mayor's granddaughter, then marched up to the bandstand with a bouquet for the Queen, curtsied six feet from the monarch—and stayed there.

The Queen broke the awkward pause by walking the six feet that were too much for Robyn and taking the bouquet from the youngster with a smile.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

IN answer to a number of questions (most of them from myself) here is a kind of report on our household:

"Are you still living at the lake?" is the question I get asked more often than any other. Right now I merely say "Yes." In a day or two I will be able to add that I am not only living at the lake, but IN the lake.

The rising is rising at phenomenal speed. It has crossed the road at one place, and almost encircled my garage in another. The house stands on a hill, but that will not delay the advance of the water for long. At night I can hear it gurgling patiently. The water can wait. It knows it will get me in the end.

Meanwhile the other members of the household carry on as usual, poor souls. I wonder if it is too late to get John di Castri to design an ark for us?

"Do you still have your crayfish?" is another question that people sometimes ask. I have one, living by itself in a glass dish full of water. We keep it as a pet, but it doesn't care much for us, even as a source of food.

I used to have a crayfish that would sit up in the dish and wave its claws, and take morsels of meat from the hand. But he died, presumably because I didn't change his water often enough. I rescued another one from some kids who had chopped off his claws and were about to use him for fishing bait. After about six months in captivity he died, too, just as he had grown a new set of claws and changed his shell.

So we have only the one survivor, a rather dull, morose and suspicious beast. Probably his kind is best adapted for survival. Even among crayfish, it is probably wise not to be too sensitive.

If the water keeps rising, the crayfish will soon be able to join his friends in the lake.

"What happened to the Siamese cat that had a passion for eating cloth?" Well, we took him to Dr. J. W. Smith, who pumped him full of every kind of vitamin and fed him every kind of food, in case he was suffering from malnutrition. He even offered him little squares of cloth, ranging from linen to nylon, some of which he devoured greedily.

Hoping the cat was cured, Dr. Smith took him home. The cat led an exemplary life for a time, and seemed to be on the wagon, so to speak. I presented him to Dr. Smith.

Then one day the veterinarian found Siam in the closet, wallowing in the rags of some $40 worth of sweaters belonging to visitors, which he had half-devoured in a sudden, blind orgy. The cat was one of Dr. Smith's few failures. He gave him to an assistant, who kept him at home shut away from cloth. Then the cat disappeared. Dr. Smith believes he was stolen.

What a shock the thieves must have got when they learned that they had a cloth-eating cat on their hands.

"How did you come to break a bottle of milk on the driveway at Government House, New Year's Day?" some people ask. "Are you one of those hooligans in dirty shirts that the Reverend Billy Hills was talking about in his column?"

These are not household questions, but they cry out to be answered. Here's the truth. Some of us from the Colonist were "making the rounds" on New Year's Day, by taxi. My wife needed a quart of milk, so I bought one at a store that happened to be open, and left it in the cab when we made our call at Government House.

I leaned the bottle against a door of the cab. At the back of my mind must have been the thought that we hadn't used that door to get out, therefore we wouldn't use it to get back in. A fallacy. When we returned to the cab, that vehicle had turned around. Maury Gwynne opened the door, and out fell the bottle and shattered on the pavement. We sheepishly picked up the pieces and moved them out of the way.

My shirt was clean, and all I drank at the reception was a cup of coffee. Say what you like. I have witnesses.

nearing completion in a basement room is a hobby shop.

The streamlined washrooms in the building are fitted with the last word in plumbing fixtures and allow plenty of room for a sailor who wants to look his best.

The old mess tables have no place in the new building. Sailors eat cafeteria style, four to a table, in a bright and expansive dining hall. At one end of the dining room food is served [illegible] tables. Beyond the serving tables lies a big, gleaming galley.

A chef's paradise, the odorless galley is fitted with such innovations as steam pressure ovens, mammoth refrigerators and mixmasters and automatic potato-peelers.

An overhead trolley arrangement is used to transport heavy carcasses of meat from the galley hatch to a butcher shop and meat refrigeration room. Food is cooked in the big central room, but is prepared for ovens in separate rooms off the main galley. Everything has been planned to increase efficiency and eliminate waste.

Administrative offices concerned with regulation of personnel at HMCS Naden are all housed on the main floor at the front of the building.

The $1,750,000 structure took nearly two years to build but would have been ready sooner if construction hadn't been held up for several months by a carpenters' strike in 1952.

More than 800 men are living in the building at present, according to Cmdr. Davidson. There is space available to in- [illegible] in time of war and "considerably more" than this number could be accommodated "in case of dire emergency."

The men said goodbye to the rigors of the old blocks on November 27 and moved into their new quarters.

Cmdr. Davidson said the new building is to be named the Nelles Building in honor of the late Adm. Percy Nelles, who was the Canadian Navy's only full-fledged admiral and the first Canadian-born chief of naval staff in Canada.

The building will be named at a special ceremony in April by Mrs. Nelles, widow of the late Adm. Nelles.

New TV Set Gives Two Shows at Once

NEW YORK (UP)—Engineers Thursday demonstrated a new device which makes it possible to see and hear two different television programs on the same receiver simultaneously.

The manufacturer suggested that the invention could solve a recurrent family crisis by allowing adults to view their choice of programs while the children watch another.

The device, called the "duoscopic receiver," was introduced by the Allen B. Du Mont Laboratories, Inc. The duoscopic receiver has two cathode ray tubes and can tune in on any two television programs simultaneously. To the naked eye the programs appear superimposed. But on wearing special polaroid glasses, a viewer sees only one of the programs. The other is filtered out by the glasses. By reversing the glasses the viewer sees the other program.

Sounds from the separate programs are channeled to the individual viewers by means of earphones or "earpieces" as the manufacturer prefers to call them, since they are small and cling to the ear something like a hearing aid. Cost of the sets may come down to $600. It is $2,000 now.

Aga Khan Losing Weight Worth $75 an Ounce

CAIRO (UP)—The plump Aga Khan is eating lightly these days even though every ounce he loses will be worth its weight in platinum soon.

The 78-year-old Moslem spiritual leader will leave for Pakistan at the end of this month to climb into a special chair scale and receive at least symbolically — his weight in platinum.

[illegible] for several days and is eating lightly—mostly such things as rice, stewed prunes and figs. A diet like this is certain to cause him to lose weight.

But the Aga Khan really doesn't care because he has all the money he could ever use.

Whenever the annual weighing in precious metals or gems comes around he customarily gives the contributions back to his followers to be used for [illegible] work.

This is the 70th anniversary of his leadership of the Ismaili Moslems and tradition demands that he receive his weight in platinum.

He has been confined to his bed with a slight indisposition at 202 pounds which makes him worth $181,800 at the current price of $75 an ounce for platinum.

Alfred Sheinwold's newest "Second Book of Bridge" (Sterling; $2.50) is all about play of the hand and doesn't take time out to discuss the bidding. But we have time to point out that while most South players would insist on playing the hand at spades, they would be wrong. With six solid tricks in spades, and no singleton or otherwise unbalanced distribution, South should be content to let North play for the nine-trick game which is ice cold against any defense.

In a book crammed with excellent deals to illustrate points of play, Freddie uses this one to illustrate the importance of the defender knocking out a vital entry before it can be used to advantage. Play the East cards with us.

Your partner opens the jack of diamonds. South wins this trick in his hand with the diamond king. He draws trumps in three leads. Then he leads a club, finessing dummy's jack and losing to your queen. What should you return? It is tempting to follow the old adage of "playing up to weakness" by leading a heart. If South has the king of hearts, your heart lead may establish a couple of heart tricks right away and then if you also get the ace of clubs you will defeat him. But you should not lead a heart. If you do, South will win the trick with the ace of hearts and lead another club. You will be able to cash one heart trick, but South will ruff the next heart and get to dummy with the ace of diamonds to discard a diamond on the established club suit. Your side will win only three tricks and South will make his contract.

Instead, you lead the queen of diamonds, to knock out North's ace before he can establish the clubs. Now when you win the next club lead with the ace you will be able to cash a diamond trick and South will be unable to get to dummy so he will sooner or later have to surrender a heart trick as well.

Spring Flowers Progressing Well

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

The wallflowers, forget-me-nots, and other spring-flowering bedding plants which were set out last fall have been growing exceedingly well this year as a result of the past mild autumn. Growth has never really ceased, and the plants are well forward, but there are a few attentions which should be given them now to ensure a colorful spring display.

Wallflowers in particular are very susceptible to the white rust disease in a mild winter, when their growth is too soft and succulent. This trouble is most difficult to eradicate, once it gets a good foothold in your plants, but it is easily prevented by dusting the foliage periodically with a mixture of two parts sulphur to one part hydrated lime.

HOLE MAY FORM

Top-heavy plants are liable to be blown about, causing a tapering hole to form in the soil around the main stem. This depression fills up with water during the winter rains, rotting the stems and inducing root die-back. Watch out for these cavities, and keep the soil well firmed around the plants.

From now until early March, the wallflowers should be fed every two weeks with superphosphate, giving a quarter of a cupful per square yard, just scratched into the soil. This will encourage healthy rooting and firm growth.

With the little double daisies, the main danger to guard against is soil splashing into the growing point during heavy rains. This rots out the growing point, resulting in a "blind" or flowerless plant. One of the best ways to guard against this danger is to spread an inch-thick layer of peat moss around each plant, working it well under the lower leaves so that no soil can be splashed into the heart of the plant.

Keep an eye on the forget-me-nots for white blotches of mildew, which often appear in a mild, wet winter. The treatment for this disfiguring infection is a light dusting with sulphur. Stir a generous dressing of soot around the plants at two-week intervals, right through to the end of the flowering period.

The greatest enemy of the polyanthuses is the slug. Examine the leaves frequently for signs of nibbling, and put down Bug-Getta pellets to poison the culprits. Like the forget-me-nots, these plants enjoy dressings of weathered soot given every two weeks, at the rate of a heaping tablespoonful per plant. As the outer leaves age and become yellow, they should be snipped off close.

PILES that Itch and Burn

If you now suffer from the itching soreness and burning pain of piles, you can be helped.

First Fine Levied Under BCHIS Plan

BURNABY (BUP)—William Ablitt, co-owner of the Auto Transport Co., here, was fined $75 yesterday for failing to register his company for payroll deductions under the new scheme of the British Columbia Hospital Insurance Commission.

Ablitt termed the BCHIS commission a "creeping bureaucracy" after hearing the judge's decision on the case.

The Auto Transport case was the first one of its kind since Health Minister Eric Martin announced his "get tough" policy regarding persons and companies not complying with the regulations.

"The hospital insurance legislation is oppressive to the individual because it is compulsory, and to the employer because it arbitrarily calls upon him to devote part of his time and facilities to the collection of what is simply a tax," Ablitt told the court.

Reduce Spending, Not Taxes, Eisenhower Asks Congress

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Eisenhower asked congress Thursday to cut government spending but forego any general tax cuts this year.

The president also declared in his state of the union message to a jam-packed joint session of the House and Senate that the United States stands ready to use its "great and growing" stockpile of atomic weapons if necessary to "preserve our freedom."

Mr. Eisenhower, speaking slowly and deliberately, also appealed to the election-year congress for bi-partisan support for his scaled-down military program on grounds that new atomic and hydrogen weapons permit economies in the use of men.

The president outlined in his 7,000-word televised and broadcast address an atomic-age program for 1954 which he said would make America stronger and safer against both Communism and depression—and with less government spending.

Mr. Eisenhower asked that convicted Communists be denied citizenship and proposed a gradual adoption of flexible farm price supports.

To keep the nation strong economically, Mr. Eisenhower pledged swift federal action in any recession and promised fiscal policies that will stimulate business. He also proposed extension of unemployment and social security benefits to millions of additional persons.

The president also called for a constitutional amendment to lower the voting age from 21 to 18.

He told congress that tax cuts can and will be made once the budget is balanced. In addition, he strongly endorsed a proposed revised tax system to remove "the more glaring tax inequities, particularly on small taxpayers."

But he strongly urged postponement of scheduled tax cuts on corporations, gasoline, liquor, tobacco and automobiles. Some influential members of congress want at least some of these excise taxes reduced on schedule April 1.

New Bridge To Cross Dry Prairie

WINNIPEG (CP)—Plans to build a bridge over a dry piece of Prairie were announced Thursday by provincial engineers. The water will come later.

Tenders were called by the public works department for a three-span, reinforced concrete bridge near suburban Headingley to form part of the Trans-Canada Highway.

George Collins, deputy works minister, said because of a bend in the Assiniboine River a bridge over the regular channel would cross at a bad angle.

So a diversion channel will be carved out and the old bed filled in. The bridge will cross the diversion channel. But to make things easier the bridge will be built first, and then the diversion put through.

Commonwealth Ministers Open Economic Parley

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters)—British and Dominion finance ministers sit down today to start hammering out a double-edged economic sword aimed at countering a possible United States recession and at further development of Commonwealth resources.

The conference will begin before newsreels and in a busy round of social activities. But after the first two days the ministers will settle down in earnest to a week of secret meetings in the luxurious Hotel Australia.

The conference will be hindered to some extent because the Randall commission set up by President Eisenhower to chart U.S. foreign trade policy will not publish its report for several weeks.

In the meantime it is believed the Commonwealth must prepare for the possibility of a tougher American attitude toward foreign trade.

But Richard Butler, British chancellor of the exchequer, is expected to urge the dominions to press on with development plans despite any temporary setback and regardless of U.S. trade policy.

Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, the new Central Federation, India, Pakistan and Ceylon are represented at the conference. The Canadian delegation is headed by Finance Minister Douglas Abbott.

Masonic Clergy Banned by Vicar

LONDON (AP)—An Anglican vicar Wednesday stirred up a three-year-long controversy simmering in Church of England councils by banning from his pulpit all freemason clergymen, including the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Rev. Thornton Thrapp, former RAF chaplain and vicar of St. Mary Magdalene in London's Paddington district, singled out Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, the archbishop and Primate of All England and a past grand master of British freemasonry, for attack in his parish magazine.

"Because the archbishop is a Mason," wrote Mr. Thrapp, "we may fairly assume his opinions are unorthodox, and far more dangerous because they are kept secret from the non-masonic rank and file."

He urged Dr. Fisher to "state in public the case for Christian masonry," and added:

"Until he does, can he really expect our trust, our confidence, and our loyalty? I cannot give him mine."

The Church of England Assembly spent several days wrangling over freemasonry three years ago.

Many leading churchmen are Masons. The assembly held that the movement is not antagonistic to the church.

Oddity

VANCOUVER (CP)—Fire, believed started by a welder's torch, chased 1,500 children from Templeton Junior High School here Thursday, but did little damage.

A double fire alarm was turned in, but smoke and water damage was confined mainly to a loft. There was no immediate estimate of damage—except to the pupils' feelings.

Why? School as usual today.

Slide Probe To Resume January 18

VANCOUVER (CP)—A royal commission probe into the slides which wrecked the B.C. Power Commission's Whatshan power plant will resume here January 18.

Mr. Justice J. V. Clyne, named by the provincial government to conduct the investigation into the slides of last August, adjourned the hearing shortly before Christmas after hearing a large volume of technical evidence and visiting the power site on Lower Arrow Lake.

Southern Strike Hearings Soon

VANCOUVER (CP)—County Court Judge A. E. Lord Thursday launched a move to end the three-month-old woodworkers' strike in British Columbia's southern Interior.

Judge Lord, whose hearings at Prince George were followed by a settlement of the 99-day northern Interior lumbermen's strike, plans to hold similar hearings into the southern dispute.

Thursday he conferred with Joe Morris, district president of the International Woodworkers of America. He met with representatives of the Southern Interior Lumber Manufacturers' Association Tuesday, and was reported to have planned a further meeting with the operators following talks with the IWA officials.

Meanwhile, the union has proposed to the southern operators that a settlement be reached on the basis of the northern agreement, which provides a 5½-cent-an-hour wage increase, maintenance of union membership on an industry-wide basis, and other contract changes.

Operators have not commented on the proposal.

The strike, involving some 2,000 union members and 3,000 other workers, closed 39 plants in mid-October after the men rejected a conciliation board's majority recommendation for a three-cent-an-hour boost.

$170,000 Stopped On Way to China

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—A federal agent Wednesday said the government has intercepted, in the last month, $170,000 mailed from the United States to Hong Kong and destined for residents of Communist China. Such transfer of funds is illegal.

Ottawa Sees Continued Prosperity, But Means Set To Fight Recession

OTTAWA (CP)—The government is convinced that Canada's economy will continue its post-war growth this year, but its advisers have carefully mapped out means of fighting a recession if it comes.

The strategy is to employ fully "built-in stabilizers," monetary and fiscal measures, public works projects, incentives to investment and even deficit financing in the event of any serious threat to keep the economy buoyant, an official said yesterday.

"Built-in stabilizers" are such things as unemployment insurance, family allowances, and old-age and veterans' pensions. These are providing an annual flow of about $1,000,000,000 to Canadian consumers.

This minimum flow would be increased in the event of layoffs since more money would be coming out of the unemployment insurance fund.

Canada lacked these "stabilizers" at the time of the devastating world depression of the 1930s.

The government also had a backlog of public works programs, such as construction of post offices and customs houses, wharves and bridges. Work on these projects could be speeded up if community labor forces became idle.

A key to prosperity was the rate of capital investment, expected this year to match last year's record $5,600,000,000.

If investment appeared to slacken, the government could provide new encouragement through lower tax rates on corporations and through accelerated depreciation, allowing industry to make bigger write-offs for income tax purposes.

REMOTE CONTROL WIRING SYSTEM
provides master switches to control lights and appliances from several convenient locations

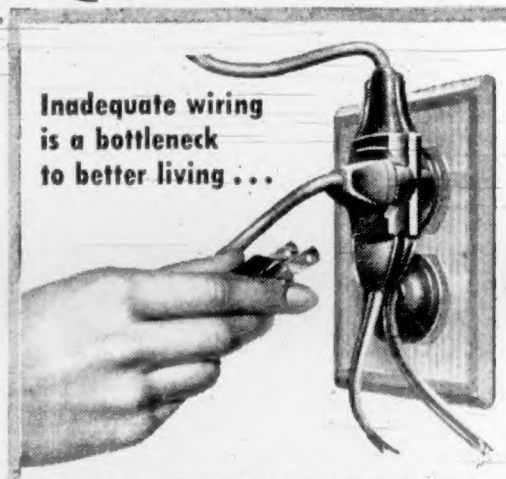
Few features of your home will create so much interest among friends as Remote Control Wiring . . . a new home-wiring system that allows you to control lights and appliances from conveniently-located master switches. This step-saving system was developed and perfected by G.E. to add to the comfort, convenience and safety of your every-day living.

A master switch at the bedside can not only turn off a forgotten cellar light, it can turn on downstairs, garage and outside lights, if you think you hear prowlers . . . even turn on your coffee in the morning. When you arrive home at night, another master switch at the front door or garage can light a pathway through the house. These master switches can be situated wherever you may need them.

Although this system is an outstanding improvement in home-wiring, it costs surprisingly little. A group of well-known Canadian architects have specified G-E Remote Control Wiring for the modern Trend Houses being built across Canada. Make certain your architect, contractor or builder includes this convenient wiring system in the plans for your new home, or discover from your electrical contractor how easy it is to install it in your present home.

Remote Control Wiring is another outstanding example of Canadian General Electric's continuing contributions to a better way of living.

Inadequate wiring is a bottleneck to better living . . .



Even in a new home you may be faced with inadequate wiring with too few circuits and outlets to plug in lamps and appliances where they are most wanted. By arranging with your architect, builder or contractor to install adequate wiring at the time of building, you make low cost provision for the work-saving appliances you own or plan to own and greatly increase the re-sale value of your home. It costs much less to provide adequate outlets when building than to add them later.

Canadian General Electric has pioneered and improved wiring materials to bring you the full benefits of electrical living through a safe and convenient wiring system. A Happy Outcome

THE re-election of Trustee Austin Curtis to the Greater Victoria School Board yesterday by acclamation is not only a handsome vindication of the stand he took in the disputed by-law referendum, but also perhaps the happiest settlement of whatever contention may have been evoked through sharp disagreement in a disputed issue. The action of Mr. William H. Williams in withdrawing his nomination for the seat will be construed as a well-intended gesture, and not merely as discretion in the face of formidable opposition. The important fact is that the community can now retain the able service and long experience of Mr. Curtis at a time when they are needed.

Mr. Curtis on being resworn as trustee indicated that the main concern now was to get the school building program resubmitted to the ratepayers in proper form and their approval for action. That we believe is also the wish of all who understand the matter. Victoria has taken on new settlement at a rate that has meant a steady influx in the schools. Adequate provision must be made for that. Dispute over costs and how they are to be met has never masked the primary need. That is for more classrooms in which to place children who are of school age now. At the same time the ratepayers are entitled to contracts down in black and white, and evidently intend to have them.

B.C.'s Drug Problem

DESPITE the earnest endeavors of various organizations and individuals, it can scarcely be said that the campaign against drug addiction and drug peddling in British Columbia has achieved conspicuous success. Narcotics rings have been broken up from time to time. The leaders have been jailed, along with their unhappy victims for whom the corrective machinery of the country makes no better provision. Prison sentences expire eventually, however, and in all too many instances the addicts return to their old haunts, the peddlers to their degrading but lucrative traffic. The evidence in recent years all tends to show that despite intensified work by the RCMP, which is responsible for the suppression of this illicit traffic, drug addiction and distribution are on the increase on the West Coast.

How to rid society of this appalling evil has become one of the most serious social problems of today. Imprisonment certainly does not appear to be the answer. On the contrary many qualified students of the problem maintain that the present system of punishment without medical treatment tends to aggravate it and to expose others to pernicious practices. Weakened morally by past indulgence, the victims wait out their time to return to the underworld, while the purveyors use their terms in the fertile field of the prison cells to contaminate others and widen their clientele.

Two possible solutions currently being studied both have strong advocates among sociologists. One is a proposal that the provincial government establish clinics for the issuance of drugs free to known addicts who cannot resist the craving. The benefit hoped for is that official distribution centres would eliminate those who peddle narcotics at exorbitant prices, save non-addicts from being inducted into the habit, and remove the addicts' incentive to commit other crimes so as to raise the money demanded by the traffickers. The obvious disadvantage is that such a scheme almost certainly would turn the West Coast into a drug-users' Mecca, causing derelicts and criminals to flock to the province from all over the country.

The other suggestion, backed by the John Howard Society with its wide experience in rehabilitation of prisoners, is that the federal government establish curative centres separate from the jails, which are not equipped for treatment of drug-takers, only for punishment. Until society has made better progress with studies of the whole problem, this seems the more practical and more promising plan for the present. Since drug addicts are migrants ever seeking sources of supply, the problem is too big for local or provincial authorities, and is the proper responsibility of the Dominion. The John Howard Society's appeal to Ottawa should have the active support of all groups engaged in the movement to stamp out this dreadful scourge.

In Father's Footsteps

LIKE father like son is a saying the truth of which is not always evident; often it seems the other way round. Seldom does a son follow in precisely the footsteps of his father and rare indeed are the occasions when not one but two sons succeed to the mantle of their immediate forebear. When the distinction is worn in succession by all three the circumstance become an event of some note. Such is the nature of the happening about which Victoria sports followers are talking this week.

Mr. Murray Patrick, whose athletic prowess is known across Canada, has left the Western Canada Hockey League to become a coach in the higher spheres of the National Hockey League. His elder brother Lynn is already a successful tutor of this calibre. Before them in his own day the father, Mr. Lester Patrick, was a famous coach with the New York Rangers, the club to which the younger son has been called. That succession would be unique enough, but preceding their coaching days all three members of the Patrick clan in turn excelled as players of big-league rank. No other hockey family can match this record.

Victorians take pride in this triple achievement, attained as it is by a family long since become part of the community. If there is some regret that one of the sons is not now coaching the Cougar club of their father, something which almost occurred three years ago, it is tempered by appreciation of a laudable human ambition to operate in the senior hockey realm and the hope perhaps that Victoria's turn may yet come. Coupled with an improvement in the fortunes of the local hockey proteges of Patrick pere, Victoria sports supporters have reason to hail the younger son's move as typical of three noted exponents of Canada's national winter pastime.

Too Much Attention

WHAT the dissident Doukhobors are suffering from in British Columbia is entirely too much attention. Their claims to be coddled in a land where they have lived for half a century, to obey only such laws as they may choose, and in general to expect public service to be at their beck and call are both childish and outmoded. Attorney-General Bonner will have the understanding and support of the grown-up and mature citizens of British Columbia for the straightforward answer he made to a handful of "demonstrators" at the Legislative Buildings this week. It was that the law stands.

THE PGE RAILWAY

Sir.—It is becoming depressingly repetitive the way the varied governments of British Columbia endeavor to sell, bargain, or barter the wonderfully potential asset of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway. It is quite true it has been a very heavy burden on the taxpayers all too long, but still it is their railway. It is also quite possible that given the right impetus it could help to start British Columbia on a more enlightened financial handling of the little empire that lies in the interior of this province.

Surely a large bond issue, raised in the province, and used to modernize and extend the railway with up-to-date rolling stock, would prove far more efficacious than the tendency to purchase other countries' out-moded material as has been done in the past. The prospect that the PGE holds is most alluring: the most majestic scenery in the world, mineral wealth of unimaginable value yet to be tapped, and industries to be encouraged.

Most important of all is that, in spite of the watery regard the varied governments have held toward the PGE, the gallant little starter has shown a good return in the past few years. Surely the citizens of British Columbia would prefer to invest in something that is really their own, and in which they have already invested large sums of money by way of interest on loans and taxes . . .

Thinking Aloud

"... of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings"

By TOM TAYLOR

WHEN I sat within the sacred precincts of Westminster Abbey last summer it never crossed my mind that that ancient shrine might collapse. To all appearances, inside at least, it seemed as strong as ever it was. Outside no doubt close examination would have revealed the ravages of time except that the Abbey was surrounded with stands and hoardings that denied inspection, and other thoughts were pre-eminent.

Yet as the restoration fund appeal which closed December 31 makes evident, this historic building is in a serious state of disrepair, so serious as to evoke grave concern for its safety. Sir Winston Churchill himself declared that "we cannot allow these famous walls to crumble," although in what might seem a queer anomaly his government has not lifted a hand to prevent such a calamity.

This abstention was in line with British concept that charitable and other fund-raising projects should be a private and personal affair, albeit some critics took the opposite view. The government spent tens of thousands of pounds to prepare the Abbey for the Coronation ceremony, it was pointed out, and it seemed only sensible that it should also provide the money to prevent its decay.

It had been feared that if restoration did not take place forthwith the Abbey might have to be closed. Time and the London climate has eroded the stone and weakened the buttresses that hold up the massive walls. The centuries have done much more damage than the Nazi blitz, which would not please Hitler did he know of this.

Other historic London buildings also bear the wearing marks of weather. The parliamentary pile of Big Ben, I noticed, is scarred and chipped, and St. Paul's too betrays the corrosive effects of fog and frost.

These are all venerable buildings, of course, age-old. Parts of Westminster Abbey date from 1269, which is nearly 700 years ago. I wonder what buildings being erected anywhere today will last as well through the centuries. Like most cathedrals The Abbey Church of St. Peter, its proper name, was added to through the years and not completed in the form we know it today until 1735, when the Wren designed western towers were built.

Incidentally the Abbey stands on the site of an earlier Norman church built by Edward the Confessor in 1065, and at its consecration the largest church which had ever been built in England or Normandy.

Architecturally Westminster Abbey has been described as the last splendid effort of the Middle Ages, but it has a significance far exceeding that distinction. It is in truth a fount of English history, a valhalla of its great men, and the most celebrated church in the Commonwealth and Empire. Thirty-one kings and sovereign queens have been crowned there; 18 of them lie within its walls. It is the burial ground of famous and eminent personages—Dickens, Tennyson, Newton, Livingstone, Darwin and a host of others. One steps aside in the nave to walk around the grave of the Unknown Warrior. Tombs and monuments galore hallow its atmosphere.

To enter the Abbey is to sense the heritage to which the Commonwealth is heir, to feel that one is a living part of the long storied history reflected by this magnificent church building. In essence that will be why response to the restoration fund appeal came voluntarily from every corner of the earth—from India, the Gold Coast, Argentina, Australia, Canada and the United States, naming only a few of the peoples who forwarded donations. One of the biggest contributions came from an unknown Canadian, whose gesture of $100,000 tied with his anonymity does him honor.

The total sum sought, and it was a large one, nearly three million donors, has not been raised in full, but enough has been donated to secure the fabric of the Abbey for years to come. This is news to be received with genuine satisfaction.

With the Classics

The anguish of the earth absolves our eyes
Till beauty shines in all that we can see.
War is our scourge; yet war has made us wise.
And, fighting for our freedom, we are free.
Horror of wounds and anger at the foe,
And loss of things desired; all those must pass.
We are the happy legion, for we know
Time's but a golden wind that shakes the grass.

Heavy Weather in Berlin

BY W. N. EWER, from London

AFTER a wearisome exchange of notes that has gone on for nearly two years, the foreign ministers of America, Britain, France and Russia are to meet in Berlin. It will be the first serious attempt (as one hopes) to come to a Four-Power agreement on German problems since the end of 1947. For at the Paris meeting in May, 1949, Mr. Vishinsky simply rejected all the "Western" proposals out of hand, and nothing was achieved except the confirmation of the agreement reached in New York for the lifting of the Soviet blockade of West Berlin.

A meeting of the four ministers, planned for 1951, failed to materialize, despite every effort by the Western powers, because the Soviet representative in preliminary talks insisted on an agenda so framed as to pre-judge the issues at stake.

And it is only natural that when after so long a time and after so many difficulties a meeting has been arranged, it should have aroused not only hopes but expectations that at last some settlement, or at least some approach to a settlement, may be possible.

What are the prospects? What are the difficulties that will arise as soon as the four ministers find themselves around a conference table without any previously agreed agenda?

Some of them are old and familiar. Throughout the long exchange of notes, the three Western powers have held that the "German problem" must be solved in what one may call a logical order. The objective (it is agreed) is the making of a peace treaty with a reunited Germany. A peace treaty can only be negotiated with a democratic all-German government. And a democratic all-German government can only be formed as the result of free all-German elections. Therefore, the first step will have to be the holding of such elections in conditions which can be regarded as free. This, it should be added, is the unanimous view of all parties in the West German parliament. And it was the view expressed to the best of their ability by the East German workers during the June demonstrations.

The Russians, on the other hand, have, if one understands them rightly, been maintaining that the first step should be negotiations of a treaty with a "provisional all-German government" formed by some sort of merging of the democratic government of West Germany and the Communist government of the Soviet zone. Elections would come at some later stage.

And it is hard to see how, if Mr. Molotov adheres to this thesis, agreement is going to be reached. For it is very certain that the West Germans of all parties except the tiny Communist minority would not agree to any such program. Especially since the June rising and its suppression, they will not hear of the East German Communists being taken into partnership or accepted as in any way the representatives of the people of East Germany. They regard them as a discredited caucus hated by the masses that they claim to represent and only kept in power by Soviet military force.

Here, then, is one difficulty which has been obvious for a long time. But there are now signs that there may be an earlier conflict of views about the nature of the conference itself. The Western powers have proposed and the Soviet Union seemed to have agreed to a conference which would primarily be concerned with Germany and Austria. But the last Soviet note appears to envisage something quite different. It avoids all reference to such matters as German reunion, German elections or a German peace treaty; and all reference to Austria.

Instead, it appears to suggest that in the view of the Soviet government the prime concern of the conference in the matter of Germany should be "the necessity of ensuring European security and eliminating the threat of a revival of German militarism." It looks as if Mr. Molotov will want to make "European security" and "German militarism" the starting point of the discussions.

Now one knows what the Russians mean when they use these phrases. Recent articles in the Soviet press harp on two themes. One is that "European security" requires the abandonment of all plans for the raising of armed forces in West Germany (though apparently not in the Soviet zone where they already exist). The other is put quite bluntly in the editorial in the December number of the Moscow News. It is that "the problem of security in Europe can be solved only if all existing American bases in Europe are eliminated."

Now if Mr. Molotov is coming to Berlin to demand as a start that the Western powers shall agree to the "elimination" of American bases and forces from Europe, he will certainly meet with a firm refusal even to discuss such a demand. For it amounts to nothing less than a demand for the liquidation of the whole NATO defensive organization.

One may perhaps note in passing that the Russian insistence now on the need for keeping Germany "demilitarized" is a complete reversal of policy. Less than two years ago Moscow was insisting, in notes to the three Western powers, that "Germany shall be allowed to have national land, air and sea forces essential for the defense of the country"; and that Nazi generals and officers must be on the same footing as everybody else. But in those days Moscow was hoping and praying for the support of a revived and anti-Western German militarism. Now its main propaganda purpose appears to be to appeal to French fears of Germany and to try to revive and rekindle Franco-German antagonism.

The tactics vary cynically. But the strategic aim is still the weakening of the West.

And so the last Soviet note and all recent Soviet writing on the subject are a warning against undue optimism. It is clear that there is at last to be a meeting of the four ministers. But it would be foolish to blind ourselves to the possibility that the meeting may run into very heavy weather at once.

Queen of New Zealand

(From The New York Times)

WHEN she broadcast from Auckland on Christmas Day, Queen Elizabeth II spoke of being "completely and most happily at home." She was, of course, just as much, within her kingdom as she would have been had she remained in London.

New Zealand is not a "tributary" to the home island but it is a free and equal member of what the Queen called "a world-wide fellowship of nations of a type never seen before." The Coronation oath takes note of this fact when it requires the Queen to swear that she will govern all the peoples of her vast realms "according to their respective laws and customs."

Of course the Queen does not really govern at all. She would not have uttered a single word of the Auckland speech if her responsible ministers had asked her not to. If there were traces of a definite personality in the speech they suggest that she is being encouraged to develop an oratorical style of her own, and these words and phrases are sometimes very touching. They mean, in the words she used, that "the Crown is not merely an abstract symbol" but "a personal and living" bond among the peoples of the British Commonwealth of Nations.

The role is important and arduous, and perhaps this estimable and beloved young woman is glad enough that she cannot decide the fate of nations or send unsuccessful politicians to the Tower of London.

The Packsack

Of GREGORY CLARK

HAVING lately come into possession of a television set, I find I have to listen to a lot more sport broadcasts that was my case when radio ruled the roost. On radio, you could avoid sports news merely by turning the button until you hit some music. You could do that without even looking. As easy as turning a tap. But this television business is different. We have only the two channels. If you turn one off and go feeling for the other, you are liable, in your clumsy fashion, to bring on one of those hectic blurs, and it may take two or three minutes, scrunching down there, to twiddle the thing back into focus.

And as like as not, all you get is another sport broadcast—by which I mean a gentleman facing you with a grave expression and a funny-looking mouth, earnestly informing you of all sorts of things you don't want to know about whose chances are what, and the latest scores between teams you never heard of, and you don't even know what they are playing. Maybe I'll get better as I grow more accustomed to the knobs.

But the point about sport broadcasts I want to make has to do with the sport voice. Both on radio and television, the sport voice, as used both by sports announcers and the numerous well-known practitioners of the various games, hockey, rugby, baseball, who are interviewed, appears to have characteristics all its own. First of all, there are adenoids in it, or else all athletes have had their noses broken. This forces them to speak down in their throats. They also pull the sides of their mouths back towards their ears, while speaking, after the fashion of Edward G. Robinson or a gentleman from Brooklyn, creating an affect of flatness and toughness.

Thus they gargle away, making certain no vocal sound escapes through their noses. The sport voice is nearest in the vocal spectrum, if one may use such an expression, to the voice used by movie villains and gangsters, and creates an illusion in the minds of innocent and uninformed people like me that is not at all complimentary to the performers on the stage of sport.

Two Canadian Vessels Sold

MONTREAL (CP) — J. B. Goulandris, a director of the Triton Steamships Company of Montreal, said last night the company has sold the 10,000-ton vessels, Triberg and Seaboard Trader, to an unidentified Liberian firm. Sale price was not announced.

He said "it is my guess" the ships will be converted to tramp steamers.

Under federal regulations, money obtained from the sale of the ships must be placed in a fund for new construction.

The Triton Company now has two vessels, the Seaboard Enterprise and the Seaboard Star — under the Canadian flag.

Home port of the Triberg and Seaboard Trader is Vancouver. Montreal is their western terminus on trans-Atlantic trips.

Cafeteria Planned

A public cafeteria will be installed at Royal Jubilee Hospital "within three months," according to George Masters, hospital administrator.

The hospital board of directors, meeting last night, discussed plans to put a cafeteria next to the present nurses' cafe on the second floor.

The cafe will be open to anyone, staff, patients and visitors, Mr. Masters said. Prices will be "at cost, no profit."

Before 1920, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police was known as the North West Mounted Police, established in 1873.

Rites Held for First Commissionaire

Funeral services were held yesterday for Victoria's first member of the Canadian Corps of Commissionaires.

Albert Hardy, 86, 636 Belton Avenue, was the first Victoria man to join the well-known corps. His corps number was one.

Mr. Hardy was born in Derby, England. He joined the British Navy in 1903 and served on HMS Driard. During the First World War he was torpedoed while serving on HMS Triumph. He was later wounded at the Dardanelles when he was on HMS Europa.

He was discharged from the British Navy in 1919 and joined the Canadian Navy in which he served on HMCS Aurora and HMCS Patricia.

He was pensioned in 1936 but rejoined the Canadian Navy at the outbreak of the Second World War and was employed at DEMS training.

He was discharged as medically unfit in 1944.

Mr. Hardy lived in Victoria for 23 years and leaves his wife, Alice, and his son, Arthur, at home; his son and daughter-in-law, Allen and Doreen Hardy of Toronto; also nieces and nephews.

He was a member of the Naval Veterans' Branch No. 42, Canadian Legion BESL.

Piscatorial Professionals Review Results of Fishy Fact-Finding

BY RONALD A. NICKERSON

OTTAWA (BUP)—When Canada's fishery scientists go fishing they come back with some of the year's best fish stories.

They bring back fish too. Fish Izaak Walton never even dreamed about. Rachel Carson might have, but not Izaak.

no others ever told. They're always true. These fish scientists of ours are sticklers for detail, they're armed with facts, figures, documented reports, eye-witness accounts, living and stuffed samples, graphs, charts and pictures.

Their latest crop of stories saw public light here yesterday at the annual meeting of their organization. It goes by the formidable name of the Fisheries Research Board of Canada.

Maybe you didn't know:

That fish get the moving urge just like humans. They don't stick to our draditional May 1 and October 1 dates, but when they do move it's a big scale (no pun) operation involving entire commu-

Or, that lights in the water at night will cause young fish to change course. Screens of air bubbles or dyes will do the same thing in the daytime.

Or, that strings of chains, hung in the water at intervals of two to 10 inches, will deflect most fish from their appointed way. Funny thing, young migrating fish will not pass readily through vertical slits made by hanging chains though they'll swim without hesitation through horizontal openings.

Or, that tropical fish are being found farther north than ever before, lending credence to reports that the North Atlantic and our climate are warming up year by year.

Or, that inland fish may some day be caught by deep-sea tricks.

Or, that a mysterious substance found in seal skins, deer feet and in rinses from the human hand may save British Columbia salmon from beating their roe out trying to jump high dams.

All these tales, and many more, were told with corroboration at yesterday's gathering of the country's best piscatorial brains.

Dr. J. L. Hart, head of the Pacific biological station at Nanaimo, B.C., reported on the sealskin-deer's foot-human hand cure for suicidal salmon.

Whatever the stuff is—in-

find out—it's a powerful repellant that scares the (day) lights out of fish and makes them alter course in a hurry.

"When sources of the repellant were introduced into the waters of Stamp Falls fishway on Vancouver Island, ascending salmon indicated alarm by active, excited swimming movements, sometimes falling back to a lower pool level," said Dr. Hart. "Upon introduction of higher dosages, a complete stoppage of upstream migration occurred until the repellant dissipated."

It could be the answer to persuade salmon to skirt such dangers as dams, irrigation ditches, diversion channels and polluted waters on ing beds. Use of the repellant could help guide them into safe fishways.

Dr. W. Templeman, director of the St. John's, Nfld., station, reported some catches of weird fish off his province's coast last summer. Strange hauls included the rare blue hake, deep-sea eels, lantern fish, viper fish, spiny eels, grenadiers not British and a creature called a dollarfish.

The St. Andrew's, N.B., station turned in a report that white shark, tarpon and several species of tropical piscees showed up off the coasts of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia last year. Some had never been known to travel so far north before.

"The appearance of this type of fish in Canadian water coincides with reports of higher temperatures in the North Atlantic and the fact that large catches of cod are being made regularly now far to the north in Davis Strait off Greenland," the St. Andrew's report said.

Dr. W. A. Kennedy, of the research station at Winnipeg, told his colleagues all about a flounder drag. It's a cone-shaped net which deep-sea fishermen drag along the ocean floor behind a motor-driven ship.

The drag, called by some an otter trawl, was given a trial run in Lake Winnipeg by Dr. Kennedy and his helpers. It was the first time the device had been used in fresh water in Canada.

Results so far didn't indicate the flounder drag would be much help to inland commercial fishermen, Dr. Kennedy said. Perhaps some day it would. It was ideal, however, for netting specimens for experiments.

Those fish who are forever changing their home address? Well, they pose a never-ending problem for those who make their living from fishing.

Research station men have to conduct an almost continuous hunt to discover where fish are to be found in the greatest numbers and why they congregate where they do. The explorations usually locate the fish but the answer to why they are p shifting from place to place is more elusive. Maybe they just want to get away from it all.

One last thing you possibly didn't know. A smaller and less powerful Danish seiner can outfish a big trawler for witch flounder.

The researchers in Newfoundland proved it last year.

Richard in Spectacular Display As Canadiens Rout Toronto, 7-3

HOW THEY STAND

New York	39	13	20	6	94	115	32
Chicago	40	8	27	5	78	125	21

Last night's scores: Toronto 3 at Montreal 7, Boston 1 at Detroit 3.
Next games: Tomorrow: Chicago at Montreal, Boston at Toronto.

Maurice Richard caught fire Thursday night and his blazing three-goal, two-assist spurge enabled Montreal Canadiens to whip Toronto Maple Leafs 7-3 in a National Hockey League game.

Detroit Red Wings rode to a 3-1 victory over Boston Bruins on the strength of third-period goals by Marty Pavelich and Metro Prystai in the other game, played at Detroit.

The two games left the Wings in first place with a one-point edge over the Canadiens. The Leafs are third, five points behind Montreal, and the Bruins fourth, another eight points back.

Richard's three goals in the game at Montreal sent his total for the season to 25 and his lifetime total to 372.

Bernie Geoffrion tallied two goals and boosted his total to 20. The other Montreal goals were by Eddie Mazur and Ken Mosdell.

Tod Sloan, Ron Stewart and Eric Nesterenko scored for the Leafs, who tied the score at 2-2 early in the second period but wilted under the Montreal drive.

ENDS SHUTOUT STREAK

The first goal of the game, by Richard, snapped a shutout streak by goalkeeper Harry Lumley that ran to 145 minutes and 35 seconds. He was last scored on December 30, when Canadiens played in Toronto, and had held Chicago and Detroit scoreless through two games after that.

Two fights broke out in the game, bringing four major penalties. Bob Bailey of Toronto and Bert Olmstead of Montreal slugged it out in the second period. Bailey nailing Olmstead with a left to the jaw. In the final period it was the Leaf's Rudy Migay and Paul Masnick of Canadiens who threw punches.

Richard's first goal was a backhander on his own rebound. His second was spectacular. Stealing the puck from defenseman Jimmy Thomson, Richard fell as he broke away but got enough of the puck as he went to the ice to slide it sharply past Lumley.

His third came on Eddie Mazur's pass from the back boards, Richard spinning around defenseman Tim Horton and backhanding a sizzler that slid off Lumley's pads.

PRETTY GOAL

The Wings went ahead 1-0 in the first period at Detroit on a solo rush by defenseman Marcel Pronovost. Pronovost stole the puck from Bruin defenseman Frank Martin at centre ice and, after skating around the veteran Milt Schmidt, sailed in to beat goalie Sugar Jim Henry.

Boston struck back at 4.48 of the second period when rookie winger Doug Mohns scored on a 20-foot screen shot, whipping the puck into a narrow opening.

Midway in the third period, Pavelich scored his sixth goal of the season when he fired past Henry on a face-off pass from Glen Skov.

The Red Wings pressed hard and Prystai scored at 11.35 on a rebound by forward Johnny Wilson, who had taken a pass from Alex Delvecchio.

Crowd of 700 Turns Out For Wrestlers

Wrestling returned to the Victoria sports scene last night and some 700 grunt-and-groan fans turned out at the Victoria Ballroom to give welcome.

Northwest tag-team champions George and Doc Gallagher added another unpopular victory to their record when their opponents, Pepper Gomez and John Paul Henning, were both eliminated during the rugged bout.

Doc Gallagher put Henning out of commission in the second fall, after losing the first to Gomez, with a series of "atomic knee drops." Gomez attempted to take on both the brothers in the deciding fall and was doing well enough until he missed a body slam and knocked himself out when he hit the aisle.

Victoria police constable Keith Hollett forced Glen Fox to yield in the one-fall opener when he caught the Californian in a Boston crab.

In the other matches, Gomez flattened George Gallagher and Doc Gallagher again used the "atomic drop" to subdue Henning.

The TACKLE BOX

BY JIM TANG

Fishing news, as could be expected in view of recent weather conditions, is scarce. Rain and wind have kept almost everybody off salt water and rivers are too high for all but the most hopeful, or most skilful, steelheaders.

A check of Saanich Inlet boathouses yesterday disclosed that few boats have been out recently and anglers who have ventured forth have been having only mediocre success. So far this winter, there has been little of the excellent grilse fishing which has been an Inlet feature for the past several years.

"It's hard to say," Harry Peard replied to a question about fishing in the Brentwood area. "Hardly anyone is out these days. There were a few out Sunday but no one did very much."

Peard stated that most of the success seemed to be enjoyed by anglers fishing deep with planer and wire line or a pound or so of weight and upwards of 200 or more feet of line. However, fishing grilse under those conditions is hardly worth while. There's no sport dragging in a little salmon weighing less than the weight and line used to catch him.

There may have been an indication of better fishing, however, in the success enjoyed by four members of the Ice Cycles east, who boated 13 Wednesday while guided by Claude Creed. The fish were caught, Creed reports, off the "White Lady" across from the Stone House. Most were taken on the short red Kam Lure and a few on abalone spoons. Flys were tried without success. Two ounces of weight were used.

Steelheaders will have to wait for an end of the rainy weather for good sport but reports have it that the fish are in most Island rivers in good numbers.

Dune Turner, a city visitor earlier this week, stated that all rivers in the Qualicum area are high and that at least two days of dry weather are needed to improve conditions to any appreciable extent. However, steelheading had been good in the Englishman and Little and Big Qualicum Rivers before the moisture got out of hand. Cherry bobbers, packed shrimp and golf tee spinners were the most successful lures.

Art Hancock reported yesterday from Cowichan Lake that the Cowichan was "very" high and that only a few steelhead are being taken. The largest he knew about weighed 14 pounds. Hancock had some good news for anglers. He said a run was on the way up river now and that the best fishing should come in the next six weeks.

But from Bella Coola comes a report which is liable to give Island anglers itchy feet—and casting arms. The Bella Coola River is loaded with steelhead and a party of six anglers recently landed 15 from one pool and lost 11 others. The largest fish of the season so far was one caught by Dick Harested. After being bled, it still tipped the scales at 22½ pounds. Harested, incidentally, has pulled 19 steelhead out of the Bella Coola this season.

Salt water anglers in these parts probably get their biggest thrill out of coho salmon, quite spectacular when caught on light tackle. But veteran anglers who have been around a lot claim there is nothing that can touch a kingfish, or king mackerel, when it comes to high-jumping.

The king mackerel is not a big fish, a 30-pounder being considered a whopper, but there are reports of one of these taking a lure and leaping higher than the outriggers of a fishing cruiser. One can only guess at the takeoff speed which enables a fish of this size to leap as high as 15 feet but it must be pretty fast. Off the record, the king mackerel must be considered no worse than the equal of such spectacular fish as the swordfish, tarpon, sailfish, marlin or wahoo.

But the king is not the only member of the mackerel family which can put on a show. The cero is just as good a jumper, but this one specializes in the broad jump and can skim over the water for 30 and 40 feet in one leap. This is its method of getting into a school of bait, and it makes them fly when it comes down.

Goose Dinners Coming Up

Stormy weather early this week brought unexpected culinary treat to local hunter Dick Piercy when he braved wind and rain Monday morning. Hunting in Central Saanich's McCue Valley, Piercy bagged his limit of ducks and also dropped two Canada geese with one shot when flock of about 20 passed at long shotgun range. Plump honker held in hunter's right hand weighed 14 pounds while other tipped scales at 11 pounds.

Grey Cup Ticket Sale Gets Vote of Approval

BY JACK SULLIVAN

TORONTO (CP)—Grey Cup tickets are being distributed fairly in the opinion of a majority of Canadian sports observers.

Sports editors and sportscasters gave the Canadian Rugby Union's present method of distribution a 33-16 vote of confidence in the annual Canadian Press year-end poll Thursday night. Many said the CRU is doing its best with an impossible job; others were too far removed from the scene to voice an opinion.

There was more unanimity among the voters on another CP poll question about the fastest-growing sport in Canada. Forty-three voted for football.

Curling collected nine votes, golf got seven and bowling, baseball, hockey, skiing and stock-car racing two each. Wrestling, harness-racing, horse racing and little league baseball were also mentioned, possibly because of regional growth.

In the Grey Cup ticket poll, the sports authorities supported the CRU plan under which the various affiliated members of the union are apportioned tickets.

TICKET PLAN

Here's how the tickets are distributed: The Big Four, Western conference and CRU each receive 30 per cent of the 27,500 tickets. The Ontario Rugby Football Union gets the other 10 per cent.

From the CRU allotment, Montreal, Ottawa and Hamilton receive an additional 1,000 each and Toronto, locale of the game, gets 2,000. The Western Interprovincial Football Union also receives an extra 1,000. "This situation would be reversed if the Grey Cup final were played in the West," said Harry McBrien of Toronto, secretary-treasurer of the CRU.

The CRU also distributes tickets from its allotment to the Quebec Rugby Football Union, Senior Intercollegiate Union, the junior and intermediate sections of the CRU, press, radio, television cameramen, photographers and other agencies in connection with the Grey Cup parade and so on.

Dawson Creek, unlisted in any Canadian football league but obviously in British Columbia, came up with a "yes" vote and this comment from Charles Mudrak of CJDC: "And there will be plenty of room when the B.C. Lions win the western final or come very close to it."

Ring Program Now Boosted To 12 Fights

Officials of the Greater Victoria Boxing Association, who announced two additional bouts last night, will present a 12-bout program at Victoria Ballroom tonight.

Added to the show is a 140-pound scrap between Fred Curtis, Victoria Fire Department, and Danzel Sandberg, Port Alberni, and a 110-pound battle between Jim Moody, 5th B.C. Coast Regt., and Al Dack, Port Alberni.

The show, which starts at 8 p.m., features a bout between middleweights Bert Wilkinson, Fire Department, and Navy's B. Ketcheson, reported to hold the Canadian amateur middleweight title.

Hoop Program At Brentwood

Brentwood teams will see action in each of three Saanich and Suburban Basketball League games scheduled to be played at Brentwood tonight.

In the opening contest, Brentwood bantam girls will face Cordova Bay. The bantam boys' club will meet Saanichton in the second game and Sidney will provide the opposition for Brentwood juvenile boys in the third tussle.

Students Best Sailors, 83-37

Chinese Students swamped Navy, 83-37, in a rough Saanich and Suburban Basketball League game played at HMCS Naden Thursday night.

CALGARY—Victoria Cougars, continuing their fine two-way play, extended their undefeated streak through three games and picked up their third point of their four-game road trip here Thursday night as they held Calgary Stampeders to a 3-3 draw.

Only 3,651 fans, smallest crowd of the season, saw the Stamps fail to get properly organized against the clever checking of the Victorians.

LIKE PRAIRIES

The tie left the Cougars with a record of seven straight undefeated games on Prairie ice—three from their last trip last season and two wins and two ties in four games this season.

Cougars are now two points ahead of the last-place Seattle Bombers and get a chance to tie the Flyers for fifth place when they continue their tour at Edmonton Friday night.

It was a team performance again as the Cougars held their own in the first period and came back after a shaky middle period to twice come from behind and dominate play in the last 20 minutes.

Every player on the club, with two exceptions, turned in a fine performance and played it according to coach Billy Reay's orders. The Cougars checked steadily and waited for the breaks, and then made the most of their chances.

ROSS GETS ANOTHER

Perhaps deserving of special mention was the play of Ed Dorohoy, always dangerous, and Ross Lowe. The lanky defenseman scored a beautiful goal to give his club the point the sixth straight game in which he has scored—and turned in a solid all-round job.

Reay stayed with the same line-up he has used for the past seven or eight games except for changing the make-up of the third line. He centred Colin Kilburn and Doug Anderson, and Dorohoy worked between Sam Bettio and Alex Kuzma. Gene Achtymichuk, Bill Sinnett and Stan Maxwell started together as the third line but Reg Abbott and Andy Hebenton joined Maxwell early in the second period and this line stayed intact for the balance of the game. Abbott and Hebenton did the penalty killing and turned in a standout job.

Walt Clune, injured slightly at Vancouver Tuesday, took his turn on defense but was somewhat bothered by a stiff knee.

NO TRADE

Reay plans one change for Friday's game. He will use Doug Macaulay and bench Sinnett. The only other player news came from general manager Fred Hutchinson, who said there was nothing doing about reports that the Cougars were about to make a trade with New Westminster Royals.

Stampeders, led by the particularly dangerous Pat Lundy, Jim McFadden, Steve Black line and the hard-working trio of Steve Wiliuk, Frank Ashworth and Archie Scott, jumped to the attack from the first face-off and Red Almas had to be good to hold them out. The red-haired goalie stole a goal from Lundy, parked alone in front of the net, and made good saves on shots by Scott and Ashworth in the first 10 minutes.

At the other end, Kilburn passed Reay in but Reay's shot went over the net with goalie Bill Brennan sprawled on the ice.

Dorohoy got the only goal of the period on an alert play, banging in a bouncing puck after a passing bout with Kuzma and Bettio.

Cougars ran into some of their old clearing trouble in the second period and some sloppy defensive play allowed defenseman Gus Kyle, a Calgary star, to wing a screened shot past Almas. Then Steve Black, moving at top speed, golfed a pass from Lundy past Almas and Stamps were ahead.

The Cougars started back there and Kuzma fired in a blazer from a bad angle after Bettio did some neat stick-handling to set him up.

But George Pargeter was left alone in front of Almas early in the third period and swiped a shot by Art Michaluk home and Cougars were behind for the second time. They came back strong, however, and tied it on Lowe's goal.

This one was the best of the game. Lowe, who had been beaten by Brennan earlier, took the puck at centre ice and simply sped past three Stamps before moving in for his hard shot.

Not taking any chances on losing the point, the Cougars clammed up from there and neither side was particularly dangerous in the last part of the game.

SUMMARY

First period—1, Victoria, Dorohoy (Bettio, Kuzma) 9.24. Penalties, Lowe 10.02, 19.41.

Second period—2, Calgary, Kyle 6.35; 3, Calgary, Black (Lundy) 17.07; 4, Victoria, Kuzma (Bettio, Lundy) 18.55. Penalties, Black 5.45, Dorohoy 5.45, Shiels 11.14.

Third period—5, Calgary, Pargeter (A. Michaluk, T. Michaluk) 7.55; 6, Victoria, Lowe (Maxwell, Hebenton) 10.16. No penalties.

Stops—Brennan, 7, 6, 10—23; Almas, 11, 6, 7—24.

Outdoors Group Takes First Case

BY DOUG PEDEN

Lower Island Amalgamated Sportsmen's Association, formed recently to co-ordinate the strength of lower Island outdoors clubs, considered its first request for support at a meeting at the British Public Schools Club last night but was unable to take any immediate action.

Called together at the request of the Cowichan Bay Salmon Club, delegates of seven other member clubs heard, and discussed at length, the fishing club's request for aid in supporting a proposed Department of Fisheries regulation which would ban the use of herring strip or fresh bait in Cowichan Bay.

NO DECISION

Since most of the delegates had not had sufficient time to learn the wishes of their respective organizations on the proposal, the meeting was neither able to support or oppose the Cowichan Bay club, which has already written the fisheries department expressing full approval of the proposed legislation.

It was decided that, since the department has asked for comments by January 15 and there was insufficient time for other clubs to call meetings and learn the wishes of their members, the angling club would continue on its own. In the meantime, delegates would take the matter up with their own organizations and be ready to act should the matter come up for consideration again.

George Hauk, representing the Cowichan Bay anglers, explained to the meeting that the department had threatened to close the Bay in the past two years and that it was probable complete closure would result unless the kill of spring salmon was lessened.

He said it was the opinion of his club that strip fishermen took far more salmon than those using artificial lures and were greatly responsible for the smaller escapement of fish on their spawning run up Cowichan River. Hauk reported that only 5,500 springs escaped into the river in 1953 compared with 8,000 the previous year and 8,500 in 1949.

It was a case, Hauk reported, of sports fishermen using only artificial lures in the future or facing the possibility of losing Cowichan Bay for angling in the spawning seasons.

McMorrans Win

Gordie Paterson's McMorran's juvenile boys' basketball team scored an easy win over Sooke at Lake Hill Hall last night, 63-22.

Bill Oldham accounted for more points alone than the losers got as he dunked in 26. George Saggers and Bill Harris had 12 and 13, respectively, for the winners.

Davis Cup Aces Qualify for Rematch

ADELAIDE (UP) — Tony Trabert of Cincinnati swept into the finals of the South Australian tennis championships Thursday with a 6-3, 6-3, 6-2 victory over Ken Rosewall and next faces Lewis Hoad, the youngster who beat him in the Davis Cup singles, in the finals.

Hoad reached the final round after a tough struggle against Rex Hartwig. After losing the first two sets of the semi-final match, the tournament titleholder recovered in the third set. Serving brilliantly he beat Hartwig 4-6, 4-6, 7-5, 6-1, 6-2.

Seixas beat Rosewall in the opening singles match of the Davis Cup challenge round to get the U.S. team off to a 1-0 lead, but when he faced Hoad in his second singles game with the U.S. then leading 2-1, the American champion bowed in a 62-game match. That put Australia even and when Vic Seixas then lost to Ken Rosewall, Australia retained the cup.

Sprout or Ailsby May Coach Bombers

SEATTLE (AP) — Frank Dotten, owner of the coachless Seattle hockey club, said Thursday Bombers may operate without a coach for a few days.

"We have a light schedule for the next couple of weeks," Dotten said. "We don't want to rush into anything.

"I talked to Danny Sprout yesterday and he is working out today to test his legs and I will talk with Ailsby some time today. I will meet with the club directors early next week."

Sprout, a defenseman who retired earlier this season, and Ailsby, who coached the club last season and has been considering retiring from professional hockey, have been named prominently in conjecture as to a possible successor to Muzz Patrick, who announced his resignation Wednesday to coach New York Rangers.

Bombers visit New Westminster Royals Saturday night and are host to Royals here Sunday night. If a new Bomber coach has not been named by that time, Dotten will handle the reins temporarily.

Athletic Activity at High Schools Resumes Tonight with Basketball

Major sports activity at Victoria high schools, following the seasonal holiday lull, swings back into high gear at Victoria High School gymnasium tonight when the Totems take on Bellingham High School Red Raiders in a senior boys' basketball game.

TOUGH OPPOSITION

—In a preliminary game start- [illegible] charges are expected to have a battle on their hands in their attempt to turn back the American club, which is a member of the Bellingham commercial basketball league. In their one game against Canadian opposition this season, the Red Raiders nosed out Vancouver's King Edward High by three points at Bellingham.

—In a preliminary game start- [illegible] High teams will clash in a junior boys' contest.

Eagerly awaited by the Totems is the annual basketball game against the old-time greats next Friday. The old-timers have yet to lose to the students although each year the Totems confidentially expect that age will have finally overbalanced the experience of the former stars, many of whom graduated from the school more than 20 years ago.

BUSY SCHEDULE

Starting January 20, Gordon Hartley's cross-country team will embark on a busy schedule, which includes four major races in less than two months.

The first meet will pit Hartley's squad against Belmont High in a three-mile race at Belmont. On January 29, Victoria High will host the Maple Ridge High School squad from Haney, considered the strongest cross-country team on the Mainland, in a three-and-one-half mile gallop.

University School will oppose the Fernwood runners in a four-mile test at Mount Tolmie in February and the annual inter-high long-distance championship, sponsored by the Canadian Legion, will be contested over a five-mile route early in March.

Football competition gets under way January 18 with the opening of play in the inter-high junior-soccer league. Two days later, senior clubs start in quest of the Colonist Cup, emblematic of senior high school soccer supremacy, when play commences in the inter-high senior league.

CURLING, TOO

Curling, a recent addition to the students' sports activities, has been started by an enthusiastic group with sessions on Monday and Thursday afternoons. Plans are being made for a spring bonspiel, which may lead to Vancouver Island and provincial championship competition in the ice sport.

Golf— Here's How

BY SAM SNEAD

The player pictured at the left is so relaxed he has overswung. The line between a free, easy swing and too relaxed swinging is hard to draw. Your balance point you can learn only by your study of your swing. You will get lower scores when you determine your rhythm point. The rhythm point is passed when swinging faster or slower destroys rhythm. If you're under 25 you're probably still elastic and you'll have to watch not to be too free and easy. If you're over 40 you're probably getting rigid and it will pay you to play with a little more relaxation but never, in either case, with carelessness. Concentration and care help both type of players. I think of golf as a game one plays privately, but in the company of others. Get it?

Appointment of Brother Has Lynn All Mixed Up

BOSTON (UP)—Coach Lynn Patrick of Boston Bruins had mixed reactions about the appointment of his brother Murray as coach of the rival New York Rangers.

"Naturally I'm tickled Muzz has landed back in the National Hockey League," Patrick said, "but it will be my business to see his club remains in fifth place and the Bruins hold fourth.

"Our first meeting, as coaches, will come January 20 in New York, and then January 23 and 24 we'll square off at Boston Garden.

"I'm happy for him, but hope he flops," Patrtick quipped.

Solomons said his London office was in contact with John Simpson, Cockell's manager who is in South Africa, ironing out a few last-minute details.

"LaStarza and his manager already have agreed to the bout," he said. "I expect Cockell's manager to give us the go-ahead in a few days. The signing will take place in New York."

Rainiers Deny Offer To Buy Satchel Paige

SEATTLE (UP)—Dewey Soriano, general manager of the Seattle Rainiers of the Pacific Coast Baseball League, has announced that there was no truth in a rumor that the Rainiers were seeking Satchel Paige, famed Negro pitcher.

Soriano said Paige was still the property of the Baltimore club and that the Rainiers had made no inquiries to the Orioles about his contract.

He has talked with the president of the San Francisco Seals, Damon Miller, regarding a possible deal which would send Jim Davis to the Seals in exchange for Elmer Singleton and Bill Boemler, Soriano said.

U.S. League Not Afraid To Fight Player War with Canadian Clubs

PHILADELPHIA (CP)—Commissioner Bert Bell of the National Football League said Thursday night if Canadian football wants a war over players he'll be glad to oblige.

Commenting on remarks made by Orville Burke, vice-president of the Western Interprovincial Football Union, that an all-out war was in the offing, Bell said:

"If they want a war over players we'll give them one. At least we haven't gone out and signed players we knew were under contract to somebody else the way they did."

Burke said in Vancouver that the NFL hired a "propagandist" to slander Canadian football and persuade United States college players to stay at home.

Bell commented:

"If he means we are telling the American players the truth about Canadian football, then we've hired a propagandist."

EXPLAINS DIFFERENCES

Bell said the NFL hired a man to go on the road and tell graduating college football players the difference between American and Canadian pro football conditions. He said the man was a former National League player and coach who also coached in Canada. Bell declined to identify the "hired man," but said that Burke knew who he was and that the man himself would be glad to admit it.

Bell said the NFL envoy was not under instructions from league headquarters and was telling American players how he found conditions in Canada, comparing them with the conditions he worked under in the NFL.

The commissioner said he didn't know what the envoy was saying but that he understood Canadian teams played 60 games in seven months, travelled all day Sundays and played again on Monday nights. He said he understood the Canadians, who received about $1,200 a season, resented the Americans receiving $6,000 and up.

Bell added:

"We're not telling players not to play football in Canada. But we can tell them what we have to offer as against the Canadians. If that's propagandizing, okay, we're propagandizing. If they call that a war over players, then we're at war.

"We've had a number of players go to Canada, and we don't resent that. We do resent it when they grab players they darn well know are under contracts."

Drivers Face Court

R. M. Herbert, 338 Michigan, charged in Saanich police court yesterday with careless driving, was fined $35 and had his driving license suspended when he pleaded guilty.

Court heard that the Herbert car was stopped on Gorge Road on the night of December 20 after being paced at more than 40 miles an hour. The car was also traveling without lights.

R. H. Wilson, 343 Caledeote, was fined $25 when he pleaded guilty to not holding a current driving license.

SPEEDER FINED

Charged with exceeding the speed limit on December 12, Glen William Rooks was fined $30.

Jagat Singh, 2565 Cook, was fined $20 when he pleaded guilty to not placing red warning lights on the highway at night after his truck had broken down on December 23.

For dumping rubbish unlawfully in Saanich, Grant King, 1666 McRae, was fined $15.

Robert E. Sorenson, 264 Cadillac, was fined $35 and had his driving license suspended when he pleaded guilty to careless driving on Carey Road on December 24.

"I drive for a living," Sorenson said to Magistrate H. C. Hall when the license suspension was ordered.

"You won't for a while," the magistrate said.

The state of Vatican City has an area of 108.7 acres with a population just more than 1,000.

Exchange Expansion Planned

Tenders have been called to provide 4,000 feet of additional floor space to house new automatic telephone equipment in the Victoria exchange, the B.C. Telephone Company, announced yesterday.

The addition will be a second story to the one story building behind the main telephone building at Johnson and Blanshard.

Also involved in the tender is a smaller addition which will be erected on the property facing Blanshard. It will house emergency power equipment.

C. W. Halford, division commercial manager for the company here, reported that when Albion, Belmont and Colquitz exchanges are converted to dial about 1,200 Victoria telephones would be transferred to those offices.

This would release the same quantity of numbers to take care of many of those now waiting for service, he said.

Montreal Bonds

Mrs. B. R. Grant, CD ambulance officer, will instruct the clerks. The first class will be held at CD headquarters, 622 Cormorant, Wednesday at 8 p.m.

Mr. Dunn presented the rose bowl to Capt. D. L. Raymond on behalf of Ontario accountants. R. L. V. Jermain, also a local chartered accountant, accompanied Mr. Dunn.

Rolls Brought from Duncan Bay

First Island Newsprint Now in Your Hands

BY HARRY YOUNG
Colonist Business Editor

The trees grew on Vancouver Island. Island men logged them and hauled them to an Island paper mill. Island men watched the mill that turned the logs into newsprint.

At Island docking firm lifted the rolls of newsprint, trundled them down the Island Highway to Victoria Press building. Several pressmen lifted the rolls to the press mezzanine and part of that newsprint was being printed in your hand right now.

Today's issue of The Daily Colonist is printed for the first time on newsprint that from tree to finished product never left Vancouver Island.

The newsprint comes from the E. Price Company mill at Duncan Bay operated by Crown Zellerbach. Early Thursday morning one of Hennessy's great 1-ton Mack diesel trucks rolled off the ferry at the Island and had loaded 20 rolls of Vancouver Island newsprint.

Seven hours later the paper was being delivered into the rear of the Victoria Press building in good time for the printing of tomorrow's issue.

The barge not only brought down the newsprint to print the next three issues of The Daily Colonist. The load weighed the twenty-ton mark—to be exact.

We are extremely proud of the fact that today's Colonist is being printed on newsprint that has been grown, [illegible]

The barge left Duncan Bay at 7 a.m. Thursday and was docked at the Victoria Press Ltd. landing at 1 p.m. The paper was used to print today's issue. Here are Hennessy employees Stan Tenney (left) and Arnold Low unloading the paper. Low drove the massive truck that brought 'Vancouver Island newsprint from E. Price Company mill at Duncan Bay to Victoria.

The '54 BUICK's got it—
The Big Change you've been hoping for!

The instant you see these 1954 Buicks, you'll know that something sensational has happened in automobile styling.

Here is vastly more than the usual model changeover. Here is vastly more than could be done just by warming over what Buick had before. Here is something accomplished by going far beyond artful face-lifting.

Here is that rarity of rarities—a completely new line of automobiles.

But Buick didn't stop with the bolder, fresher, swifter-lined beauty you see in raised and lengthened fender sweep—in the huge and back-swept expanse of windshield—in the lowered roofline—in the host of extra glamor features of exterior modernity.

They upped all horsepowers to the highest in Buick history.

They engineered a new V8 for the low-priced SPECIAL, so that now the entire Buick line has Buick's famous V8 engine—and in the process came up with new Power-Head Pistons that boost gasoline mileage in every engine.

They brought to market a sparkling newcomer with a famous name, the Buick CENTURY—a car with phenomenal horsepower for its weight and price—a car with more pure thrill per dollar than any Buick ever built.

And they did all this without change of the price structure which, for years, has made Buick the most popular car at its price in the world.

We invite you to come in and inspect these great beauties, these great performers, these great buys. Then you'll see why previewers are already saying, "Buick's the beautiful buy!"

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT—BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

Tools Costly Item For Car Repairs

BY FREDERICK C. RUSSELL

The biggest handicap to the 1954 cars will be an excess of 1924 driving.

When I complain somebody will say on the high cost of trying to do too many home auto repair jobs I naturally received complaints from those mechanically-inclined owners who do have the magic touch. However, they will have to admit that know-how isn't everything these days. I refer to the need for special equipment, particularly tools. One company is making 18 different kinds of pliers, each designed to do a special job on the average car. It's pretty hard to match this advantage when you want to do a job on the car.

If you have thought of a pair of pliers as being just one of those tools you find kicking around the house, inspection of a good mechanic's tool kit will call for a revision. There are special varieties known as "brake key pliers," gripping or water pump pliers, those with a curved nose, a type for use on brake springs, another for work on ignition parts and those which have an angle nose for battery work.

HELP IN DIAGNOSIS

One thing about a low-speed shimmy is the fact that it helps us eliminate two important factors which apply when the wheels go into a dance at higher speeds. One is the matter of tire and wheel unbalance. This doesn't show up at speeds under 30 miles per hour. The other is the matter of looseness of the propeller shaft. If universal joints are badly worn the shaft will start whipping at higher car speed, this vibration adversely affecting the front wheels. Among the things which cause shimmy at low as well as high speeds are: underinflation, defective shock absorbers, weak springs and looseness in the steering system.

MECHANIC JOE SPEAKING

"I wouldn't expect many car owners to know that it is always important not to mix different types of wheel bearing grease. Such greases may be made with sodium or lithium soaps, and either will do the job of keeping the wheel bearings happy without the business of thinned out lube getting into the front brakes. However, if these two are mixed the concoction becomes semi-liquid.

"Another point, in addition to cleaning and drying the bearings when giving them a greasing is to allow some space for the lube to expand. This expansion takes place in the hub and between the inner and outer bearings."

THREE-WAY DUSTING

I am indebted to a reader for passing along a useful suggestion to those drivers who wear glasses. He says it was some years before he realized that the glare he was getting from oncoming headlights was greatly magnified by dust on his eyeglasses. So he always does a cleaning job at sundown. I might add that it also pays to wipe off the inside of the windshield. It can get quite dusty too.

Do you have trouble getting a clear picture of what's wrong with rear end gear mesh if the car develops "drive," "coast" and "float" noises? I'll admit that it isn't easy to carry this in mind, which is one reason why the illustrations in the newest edition of my Car Care book are so helpful.

Lines drawn on a typical gear tooth show the different kinds of troublesome contacts such as "flank" and "partial face," or excessive "toe" and "heel" meshing. The chapter on rear axles explains much that can be puzzling if not illustrated.

WHAT'S YOUR TROUBLE?

Q. I have been told that if there is less water in the battery in winter there will be more power for cranking. Is this true? H.N.

A. According to the newest view a lower electrolyte level has this advantage. But keep the level above the plates.

Q. Just how much can a motorist expect to improve mileage by following the rules of skillful operation? I hear this subject tossed about quite a lot these days, but scientific information seems to be lacking. Wm. F.D.

A. You can figure about five miles per gallon, according to one reliable survey.

Q. How often is it necessary to check the brakes? I do not mean a test of the pedal position and stopping efficiency, but of the entire braking system with wheels removed and everything. J.N.

A. This is hard to say, but I think it would be a good plan to invest in such a check-up every 5,000 miles. Surprised?

Q. I hope you can figure out why the engine of my car is so rough idling. We have done just about everything in the book, but still get that annoying shake whether the engine is cold or hot. K.E.L.

A. Wonder if you have checked to find out if there is a leak between adjacent cylinders due to a defective head gasket. This causes just enough of a mix-up, even if the leak is slight, to affect idling adversely.

Q. The engine of my valve-in-head car is equipped with one of those silencing pads. It has been there several years. Should this be replaced? G.G. McB.

A. Yes, the pad acts something like a filter and is probably pretty well loaded up with junk that would ordinarily have passed down to the valve and tappets to gum things up.

Q. Universal joints on my car need replacing. Is it necessary to pull the rear axle in order to do this job? J.W.

A. On you car, yes. This is because the joints are enclosed in a torque tube.

Mr. Russell will answer questions regarding the safe care and operation of your car. Just address him care of The Daily Colonist and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a personal reply. Please confine inquiries to one subject and limit letters to 100 words or less.

Soviet Limousine Curiosity in U.S.

WASHINGTON A fire-engine red Russian limousine, rumored belonging to the Russian president of South Korea, Actually exclusively for a Kremlin big-shot and believed to be the only one outside Soviet borders, is now the private property of an American citizen.

Captured in Korea at a Communist command post, the rare Russian-built "Zis" is now in Columbia, S.C., where it arrived after a boat trip across the Pacific and a road trip across the U.S. under its own power. It is owned by Hoyle Dobson, an exhibitor of Cayce, South Carolina.

MOSCOW WANTS IT

Dobson is going to keep the car or sell it to a U.S. military or intelligence agency even though Moscow would like to get it back.

Dobson related the history of the Zis to North American Newspaper Alliance, including an offer from Amtorg, the Russian commercial organization in New York, which offered him $40,000 for the vehicle. He says he has $25,000 invested in the Kremlin limousine and will sell it for that price to an automobile manufacturer, a collector of automobile oddities or the U.S. government.

The Zis is manufactured exclusively for high Communist officials. The fire-engine red is the original color, and on each of the front doors a hammer and sickle in blue has been painted.

FLIGHT ATTEMPTED

The Zis was originally presented to Major-Gen. Walton H. Walker by Syngman Rhee, president of South Korea. Actually, a Russian attempted to flee in a Chinese Communist general and the limousine when South Korean troops surprised the Communist command post. Korean sources in Washington say they do not know what happened to the Red general or his Soviet traveling companion.

The limousine is not for sale in Moscow. It is presented free to Soviet big shots. Ordinary Russians can buy a Pobeda, which is always painted black and is a cross between a U.S. Model A Ford and a Willys Jeep.

MANY GADGETS

Loaded down with fancy gadgets, the Zis nevertheless has a built-in towing bar in the front in case of a breakdown. The Zis resembles a Packard, although other features are copied from other American-made vehicles. The bottom half of the rear fenders are exact duplicates of the Oldsmobile's; the rear deck, bumpers and bumper guard are copied from the '53 series Packard.

Built to burn alcohol, the Zis was supplied with an American made, gasoline carburetor for the cross-country drive. Weighing 7,031 pounds, it has an L-type head and engine, which delivers 221 horsepower. It has a top speed of 125 miles per hour and in Moscow got nine miles to a gallon of alcohol, five miles to a gallon of U.S. gasoline.

POWERFUL RADIO

Equipped with a powerful short wave radio, the Moscow luxury car has two 6-volt batteries, the finest mohair upholstery, hydraulically operated windows and top grade, gum rubber, white wall tires, manufactured in a lend-lease rubber plant shipped to Russia during the war.

Doors are of double one-eighth-inch-thick sheet steel and the chassis is reinforced to carry the extra weight. It has a 148-inch wheelbase and an over-all length of 20 feet.

BRIDGLINGTON, Eng. (CP) — Truck driver James Mainprize, 35, was fined 10 shillings Wednesday after police testified that mud dripping from the truck wheels endangers road safety.

Crack Race Driver Urges Caution Always

NEW YORK What's the advice of one of the world's greatest racing car drivers to the pilot of the average family jalopy?

Well, maybe not so oddly, it's simply: "Be careful. Have control of your car at all times."

The expert advice-giver is Juan Manuel Fangio. Fangio was the winner last month of what is generally considered to be the world's toughest auto race. This is the gruelling Car-[illegible] 2,000 miles of narrow, winding mountainous roads in Mexico, stretching from the Guatemalan border to Juarez on the Texas border. This year, 11 persons, including three of the drivers, were killed during its running.

Fangio, an Argentine of Italian descent, driving an Italian Lancia, attained an average speed of 105.73 miles an hour to win. This was 3.1 miles an hour faster than that made in the internationally famous race last year by Karl Kling, in a German Mercedes Benz. Fangio's victory, incidentally, broke a virtual stranglehold which European drivers have held on the winner's laurels at the event ever since it was inaugurated.

Fangio, winner not only of glory, however, but of $18,000 for the Carrera Pan Americana, was in New York recently to talk to the press, prior to leaving for more races in Europe. The sports-car aficionados of the press were there in force, well over a score of them — to ask him all sorts of technical questions about piston displacements, horsepowers, comparative excellences of Lancias, Maseratis, Mercedes Benzes, Jaguars and what have you. Senor Fangio answered them patiently for well over an hour.

But for the general driving public, Fangio has three comments:

"The way to be a good driver is to have your car under control at all times.

"Never attempt to do more than your car can do — that's the secret, whether you want to win a race, or whether you're merely out driving with your family.

"If you're at all interested in becoming a racing driver, the best way is to start small — that is, with the smallest type of racing car you can find — and work up to the larger cars. Again, the important thing is to have the machine under control at all times."

Despite his Argentine citizenship, Senor Fangio spends a major share of his year in Italy and Europe, taking part in various auto races. And despite the richness of the prizes he wins, he declares that he is not interested in the money end of the deal only in winning. "People who run for money never win," he commented laconically. The fact, however, that Senor Fangio is reputed to be one of the richest men in the Argentine may have something to do with this unavaricious attitude.

Someone asked him, in view of the amount of time he spends in Italy — if he knew an Italian racing driver, name of Roberto Rossellini, mentioned a few months ago as one of the possible contestants in the Carrera Pan-Americana.

Senor Fangio smiled, said that he knew Signor Rossellini well. "As a motion picture director . . . excellent! As a racing car driver . . . well, 'peut-etre,' which liberally translated means so-so.

Did Ingrid (Ingrid Bergman, Rossellini's wife) ever drive racing cars? "Unfortunately," commented Senor Fangio, "I have never had the pleasure of meeting Signora Rossellini."

As reporters left the Italian state tourist office, where the press conference was held, they were interested to note that an official car of Carrera Pan-Americana Mexico was standing outside. It was an American Ford.

STAMP INDUSTRY

The main industry of Vaduz, capital of Liechtenstein, is production of postage stamps.

Carelessness Costs Driver Fine of $35

William H. Smith, 1419 Fort, was fined $35 in city police court yesterday when he pleaded guilty to a charge of careless driving.

Court was told the Smith car was in collision with another at the intersection of Government and Niagara on December 25. About $175 damage was done to both cars.

TWO INFRACTIONS

Charged with two traffic infractions, Roy Rudge Wriggles-worth, 809 Selkirk, was fined a total of $20.

For exceeding the 30-mile-an-hour speed limit on Douglas on December 5, he was fined $15. Charged with failing to give a hand signal before turning the corner at Johnson and government on December 14 he was fined $5.

TIPPLERS' TAX MAY GO OUT, BENNETT SAYS

Snow Strikes East

Railroad Blocked, Phone Lines Fall

From CP and UP Dispatches

Interior B.C. settlements were still digging out early today after the worst snowstorm of the winter smashed telephone lines, blocked railway tracks and piled drifts more than 18 feet in height at some points.

The storm struck simultaneously with heavy blasts in Eastern Canada and across the Atlantic where the first big tide of the year swept against low-land sea walls and pounding seas brought a flurry of distress calls from European shipping.

At least one life was lost in the eastern storm, that of Mrs. Louis Desrosiers, 70, of Montreal, who died in a two-car collision.

SETTLEMENTS BURIED

Some settlements in the Coquihalla Pass area of B.C. were all but buried by the heavy snows.

Canadian Pacific Railway crews worked around the clock to clear tracks through the pass for Kettle Valley trains, but new snow continued to block the line yesterday.

Housekeepers and storekeepers in the storm zone were digging their way out of snow that sometimes reached the eaves.

Meanwhile in the Allison Pass district B.C. Telephone linemen were plowing through drifts to repair broken lines. Trains were being rerouted for the Kettle Valley through Spence's Bridge.

Hard-pressed snow plows could keep a single line open along parts of the Allison Pass highway.

Montreal was hardest hit in the east. Almost 10 inches of snow fell on the city and district. Traffic was disrupted while more than 2,500 men and 500 pieces of equipment fought the storm, fanned by a 15-mile-an-hour wind.

Traffic was reported moving normally again today, however.

In Ontario four inches of snow fell while the Maritimes reported nine inches.

Overseas, a slackening in North Sea gales spared the beleaguered European coast from floods like those that killed 2,000 persons a year ago.

Nevertheless strong winds piled water two feet above normal level yesterday and a further onslaught was due Saturday when the first of the spring tides will test reinforced dike defenses.

British Air Ministry forecasters said there was no indication of dangerous winds in the 12 hours beginning last midnight but future conditions appeared unsettled.

Old Order Changed for Matelots

Modern sailors at HMCS Naden no longer sling hammocks over mess tables. Sleeping and eating quarters are separate in the new barracks building and sailors, in groups of four, sleep in single beds in separate cabins. The rooms are equipped with rugs and lockers and sailors can install their own radios if they wish. Shown above relaxing in one of the cabins are Ordinary Seaman R. Parkinson, Vancouver, and Ordinary Seaman A. Stratychuk, Yorkton, Sask.

Ordinary Seaman K. Flieger, Chatham, N.B., is shown above pressing his uniform with equipment provided in new barracks block at HMCS Naden. The building has the last word in facilities to help sailors look their best. There are two sets of laundries, drying rooms and pressing rooms on each deck of the three-deck building.

New Look Promised

Northern Extension of PGE Part of Plans, Premier States

British Columbia's 10-per-cent luxury tax on drinks may be repealed at the coming session of the legislature, Premier W. A. C. Bennett indicated Thursday.

The premier also announced that the government's Pacific Great Eastern Railway will be extended in both directions, and indicated again that Finance Minister Einar Gunderson will resign from the cabinet next month.

Back in his office after a month-long absence, the premier told reporters of his recent trip to Ottawa and New York and his home-town holiday in Kelowna where, he bragged, he picked roses in January—"just like in the capital."

He confirmed Kelowna reports that he would ask the House to "take a new look" at the 10-per-cent tipplers' tax, imposed when the new Liquor Act was passed three months ago. The tax has brought complaints from veterans' clubs and other organizations which must charge the tax on their members' drinks.

"If a formula can't be found that works better than this one," Premier Bennett said, "then I will recommend to my colleagues that it be removed entirely."

Mr. Bennett added to reports that he was ready to go ahead with the southern extension to the PGE, from Squamish to North Vancouver.

He said he would recommend to the PGE board of directors, of which he is chairman, that a start be made on extending the line in both directions, with the northern extension from Prince George serving Fort St. John as well as Dawson Creek in the Peace River country.

The southern link would bring in no new business for the railway, he said, but "we must have a tunnel ready to handle the increased traffic which will result when the northern extension is built."

He said he still looks for co-operation from the federal government in extending the line.

"I think there will be aid," he said. "The question is how much."

Reports from Ottawa have indicated the federal government has dropped Premier Bennett's ambitious plan for "joint investment" by the two governments in the PGE, major highways and forest protection into the wastebasket.

Mr. Bennett said, however, he did not consider these reports to be official. He would wait for a direct answer from Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent, he said.

The premier said he had been misinterpreted in a Kelowna speech in which he was reported to have indicated Finance Minister Gunderson would try to regain a seat in the legislature through a by-election.

"Mr. Gunderson's status is unchanged from the statement I made just before leaving for Ottawa," the premier said.

(At that time Mr. Bennett said the defeated finance minister had agreed to stay on until after the Ottawa trip and the spring estimates had been completed. This was taken to mean Mr. Gunderson would quit just before the spring session of the legislature.)

Date of the session has not yet been set, but will be soon, Mr. Bennett said. A likely date is February 16.

In New York, Mr. Bennett said, he and his colleagues had talked to three groups of investment bankers about the prospect for investment in B.C.

"I was greatly impressed by their knowledge of B.C. and the Peace River country," he said. "I found in New York more awareness of what is happening here than I found in Eastern Canada."

Bonner Silent On Plan

Education Minister Robert Bonner was non-commital Thursday about a Vancouver report that the Rolston Formula would be withheld for a year.

He declined to comment on the story which said the formula, named after the late Education Minister Tilly Rolston and planned to redistribute the burden of school taxation, would not be enacted at the coming session of the legislature.

The formula was first introduced in the spring of 1952. It was bitterly opposed by a majority opposition and led to the government's defeat.

Last official word on the subject was that the formula would be modified before being re-introduced.

The Vancouver report said it would be held off for a year's study.

Hospital Death Mystery

TORONTO (CP)—Helen Boyle, 21-year-old hospital technician found unconscious on a laboratory floor Wednesday night, died Thursday night of skull fractures.

Police said it may never be known whether she was injured in a fall or was slugged by a prowler.

She died without regaining consciousness about 24 hours after she was found in the darkened laboratory at St. Michael's Hospital. Two emergency brain operations were performed in a vain effort to save her life.

The theory that she slipped and struck her head on a protruding table edge gained ground, although police continued to give some consideration to the theory she could have been struck from behind by a prowler.

Doctors and detectives said the fracture of her temple corresponds in size and shape to the corner of the table. Doctors said a fracture at the back of her head is of the type often caused by a backward fall to a hard floor.

Spirits Called In For Dead Woman

VANCOUVER (CP) — Doctors, some living and others "dead 200 years," figured in evidence being compiled by two law enforcement bodies Thursday.

The probe was ordered by city police and the attorney-general's department after a coroner's jury labeled a Vancouver physician a "guilty of gross negligence" in the death of his "soulmate" wife.

The jury said Dr. Raymond D. Rush failed to provide "proper hospital and medical care" for his spiritualist wife in the final hours of her life, November 30.

Mrs. Margaret Rush, 39, died of natural causes, "the result of ulcerated colitis with terminal aspiration of stomach contents while in a coma," the jury found.

At the inquest Dr. Thomas Dalrymple said he treated Mrs. Rush from 1949 to 1952. He said Dr. Rush told him his wife was receiving spiritualism in the form of faith-healing. She was being treated by three German doctors who had been "dead for 200 years," Dr. Dalrymple said Dr. Rush told him.

Five doctors, two insurance executives, an undertaker, the city analyst and two detectives testified.

Dr. T. R. Harmon said the dead woman's organs showed a large content of barbiturates.

Dr. Rush was quoted as saying his wife fell down stairs and suffered a cerebral haemorrhage. Other doctors testified no sign of head injuries could be found.

The associates said they advised the doctor to get his wife into hospital at once. However, Dr. Rush refused to do so and asked his fellow doctors to sign a certificate of death before his wife died listing cerebral haemorrhage as cause of death.

Dr. Rush was quoted by detective C. W. McKay as saying he knew his wife was going to die and refused because of religious beliefs to put her in hospital.

"We are soulmates," the doctor was quoted.

"When I told him his wife's body had been taken in for an autopsy . . . he pleaded that we wait at least 24 hours," Detective McKay said.

Asked for a reason, Dr. Rush was quoted:

"You wouldn't understand. We believe in spiritualism. My wife and I are soulmates."

Conductors Change Union

MONTREAL (CP)—A majority of 2,000 Canadian National Railways conductors have rejected their present union, the Order of Railways Conductors, in favor of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, it was announced Thursday night.

A. J. Kelly of Ottawa, international vice-president and Canadian head of the brotherhood, said he understands the brotherhood has won a representation vote in both eastern and western Canada, although no figures of the count are available. The count was held Thursday in Ottawa by the national labor relations board.

The labor relations board authorized the vote last fall when the brotherhood claimed it had a majority of CNR conductors.

Magistrate Reduces Charge

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP)—A murder charge against a 15-year-old boy, who admitted killing his father with a single punch when the parent came home drunk, was reduced to manslaughter at a preliminary hearing here Thursday.

Magistrate Lionel Hector Potts reduced the charge against Roy Milton Kenny after hearing the testimony of an RCMP constable who took the boy into custody.

The strapping, six-foot youth was charged with killing his father, George Kenny, 49, at their farm home at South Wellington near here December 16.

Const. George Phillips testified that the boy had told him: "I did it because he attacked me."

Under cross-examination, Phillips said he had known the elder Kenny for seven years to be "a man of violent temper."

A doctor testified that Kenny died from a broken neck, the result of one punch thrown by the son.

The boy is free on $10,000 bail.

New Barracks Sight For Old Salts' Eyes

BY LAWRIE JOSLIN

You old salts who left the navy at the end of the Second World War would find your eyes blinking with amazement at the wonders of life beyond the wide glass doors of the handsome new barracks at HMCS Naden.

A group of newspaper and radio men toured the sprawling three-deck, steel and concrete structure yesterday, the guests of Cmdr. G. H. Davidson, executive officer of HMCS Naden; Lieut.-Cmdr. J. E. Korning, Naden first lieutenant, and Lieut.-Cmdr. Bruce McGregor, officer in charge of the block.

Navy men hesitate to call the hotel-like structure a barracks block. They'd rather call it a "living block" and, compared to the rigors of navy barracks life in the old days, the modern matelot is really living.

Life was never like this in "A" and "B" blocks, or "X" and "Y" blocks still standing down the hill from the trim new building.

Instead of sleeping in hammocks slung over mess tables, these latter-day salts are sleeping four to a cabin in single beds equipped with such modern innovations as sheets and pillows.

These cabins are finished in a pastel shade of grey (public rooms are painted pastel green). Each man has a wall lamp at the head of his berth. He doesn't have to put his feet down on a cold deck, either, because there is a rug beside every berth. Each cabin holds four generous-sized lockers, fitted with a chest of drawers and space for hanging gear. Each man may have a radio beside his bed if he wishes.

The modern sailor doesn't have to remain cooped up with his cabin mates. He can stroll down the corridor to a comfortable lounge and read and write a few steps of his cabin are laundry facilities of the latest design which he can use to wash, dry and press his clothes in a twinkling.

In the basement of the building are a tailor shop, a barber shop, a games room and a baggage room where individual gear not in use can be checked. Also

Index System Set For Garden Notes

Interest in gardening in Victoria where roses bloom in January and pansies nod their heads in the depth of winter is constant and intense.

This fact has been evidenced in dozens of ways, but particularly in the enthusiasm with which Colonist readers have received the column "Garden Notes" written by M. Vesey Chesnut.

Throughout 1953 Mr. Chesnut provided a wealth of information for garden lovers — both those who like to grow things and those who are content to just look and enjoy nature's beauties.

The writer of "Garden Notes" has received hundreds of letters praising his efforts and soliciting information on various aspects of plants and gardening. Many enthusiastic gardeners have carefully clipped his columns from day to day and saved them.

In this connection, Mr. Chesnut has received numerous requests to provide a system for indexing his writings. In appreciation of the popularity of his work during the past year, he agrees than an index-system might prove useful and intends to do something about it.

Gardeners who wish to maintain a comprehensive file of "Garden Notes" are advised to clip Mr. Chesnut's columns daily and paste them in order of the date of their publication.

Once every three months in future Mr. Chesnut will provide an alphabetical index under which the various columns may be identified with the publication date.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

IN answer to a number of questions (most of them from myself) here is a kind of report on our household:

"Are you still living at the lake?" is the question I get asked more often than any other. Right now I merely say "Yes." In a day or two I will be able to add that I am not only living at the lake, but IN the lake.

The rising is rising at phenomenal speed. It has crossed the road at one place, and almost encircled my garage in another. The house stands on a hill, but that will not delay the advance of the water for long. At night I can hear it gurgling patiently. The water can wait. It knows it will get me in the end.

Meanwhile the other members of the household carry on as usual, poor souls. I wonder if it is too late to get John di Castri to design an ark for us?

"Do you still have your crayfish?" is another question that people sometimes ask. I have one, living by itself in a glass dish full of water. We keep it as a pet, but it doesn't care much for us, even as a source of food.

I used to have a crayfish that would sit up in the dish and wave its claws, and take morsels of meat from the hand. But he died, presumably because I didn't change his water often enough. I rescued another one from some kids who had chopped off his claws and were about to use him for fishing bait. After about six months in captivity he died, too, just as he had grown a new set of claws and changed his shell.

So we have only the one survivor, a rather dull, morose and suspicious beast. Probably his kind is best adapted for survival. Even among crayfish, it is probably wise not to be too sensitive.

If the water keeps rising, the crayfish will soon be able to join his friends in the lake.

"What happened to the Siamese cat that had a passion for eating cloth?" Well, we took him to Dr. J. W. Smith, who pumped him full of every kind of vitamin and fed him every kind of food, in case he was suffering from malnutrition. He even offered him little squares of cloth, ranging from linen to nylon, some of which he devoured greedily.

Hoping the cat was cured, Dr. Smith took him home. The cat led an exemplary life for a time, and seemed to be on the wagon, so to speak. I presented him to Dr. Smith.

Then one day the veterinarian found Siam in the closet, wallowing in the rags of some $40 worth of sweaters belonging to visitors, which he had half-devoured in a sudden, blind orgy. The cat was one of Dr. Smith's few failures. He gave him to an assistant, who kept him at home shut away from cloth. Then the cat disappeared. Dr. Smith believes he was stolen.

What a shock the thieves must have got when they learned that they had a cloth-eating cat on their hands.

"How did you come to break a bottle of milk on the driveway at Government House, New Year's Day?" some people ask. "Are you one of those hooligans in dirty shirts that the Reverend Billy Hills was talking about in his column?"

These are not household questions, but they cry out to be answered. Here's the truth. Some of us from the Colonist were "making the rounds" on New Year's Day, by taxi. My wife needed a quart of milk, so I bought one at a store that happened to be open, and left it in the cab when we made our call at Government House.

I leaned the bottle against a door of the cab. At the back of my mind must have been the thought that we hadn't used that door to get out, therefore we wouldn't use it to get back in. A fallacy. When we returned to the cab, that vehicle had turned around. Maury Gwynne opened the door, and out fell the bottle and shattered on the pavement. We sheepishly picked up the pieces and moved them out of the way.

My shirt was clean, and all I drank at the reception was a cup of coffee. Say what you like. I have witnesses.

Barracks Block Just Like Hotel

nearing completion in a basement room is a hobby shop.

The streamlined washrooms in the building are fitted with the last word in plumbing fixtures and allow plenty of room for a sailor who wants to look his best.

The old mess tables have no place in the new building. Sailors eat cafeteria style, four to a table, in a bright and expansive dining hall. At one end of the dining room food is served piping hot from steam serving tables. Beyond the serving tables lies a big, gleaming galley.

A chef's paradise, the odorless galley is fitted with such innovations as steam pressure ovens, mammoth refrigerators and mixmasters and automatic potato peelers.

An overhead trolley arrangement is used to transport heavy carcasses of meat from the galley hatch to a butcher shop and meat refrigeration room. Food is cooked in the big central room, but is prepared for ovens in separate rooms off the main galley. Everything has been planned to increase efficiency and eliminate waste.

Administrative offices concerned with regulation of personnel at HMCS Naden are all housed on the main floor at the front of the building.

The $1,750,000 structure took nearly two years to build but would have been ready sooner if construction hadn't been held up for several months by a carpenters' strike in 1952.

More than 800 men are living in the building at present, according to Cmdr. Davidson. There is space available to increase the complement to 1,400 in time of war and "considerably more" than this number could be accommodated "in case of dire emergency."

The men said goodbye to the rigors of the old blocks on November 27 and moved into their new quarters.

Cmdr. Davidson said the new building is to be named the Nelles Building in honor of the late Adm. Percy Nelles, who was the Canadian Navy's only full-fledged admiral and the first Canadian-born chief of naval staff in Canada.

The building will be named at a special ceremony in April by Mrs. Nelles, widow of the late Adm. Nelles.

New TV Set Gives Two Shows at Once

NEW YORK (UP)—Engineers Thursday demonstrated a new device which makes it possible to see and hear two different television programs on the same receiver simultaneously.

The manufacturer suggested that the invention could solve a recurrent family crisis by allowing adults to view their choice of programs while the children watch another.

The device called the "duoscopic receiver," was introduced by the Allen B. Du Mont Laboratories, Inc. The duoscopic receiver has two cathode ray tubes and can tune in on any two television programs simultaneously. To the naked eye the programs appear superimposed. But on wearing special polaroid glasses, a viewer sees only one of the programs. The other is filtered out by the glasses. By reversing the glasses the viewer sees the other program.

Sounds from the separate programs are channeled to the individual viewers by means of earphones or "earpieces" as the manufacturer prefers to call them, since they are small and cling to the ear something like a hearing aid. Cost of the sets may come down to $600. It is $2,000 now.

Spring Flowers Progressing Well

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

The wallflowers, forget-me-nots, and other spring-flowering bedding plants which were set out last fall have been growing exceedingly well this year as a result of the past mild autumn. Growth has never really ceased, and the plants are well forward, but there are a few attentions which should be given them now to ensure a colorful spring display.

Wallflowers in particular are very susceptible to the white rust disease in a mild winter, when their growth is too soft and succulent. This trouble is most difficult to eradicate, once it gets a good foothold in your plants, but it is easily prevented by dusting the foliage periodically with a mixture of two parts sulphur to one part hydrated lime.

HOLE MAY FORM

Top-heavy plants are liable to be blown about, causing a tapering hole to form in the soil around the main stem. This depression fills up with water during the winter rains, rotting the stems and inducing root die-back. Watch out for these cavities, and keep the soil well firmed around the plants.

From now until early March the wallflowers should be fed every two weeks with superphosphate, giving a quarter of a cupful per square yard, just scratched into the soil. This will encourage healthy rooting and firm growth.

With the little double daisies, the main danger to guard against is soil splashing into the growing point during heavy rains. This rots out the growing point, resulting in a "blind" or flowerless plant. One of the best ways to guard against this danger is to spread an inch-thick layer of peat moss around each plant, working it well under the lower leaves so that no soil can be splashed into the heart of the plant.

Keep an eye on the forget-me-nots for white blotches of mildew, which often appear in a mild, wet winter. The treatment for this disfiguring infection is a light dusting with sulphur. Stir a generous dressing of soot around the plants at two-week intervals, right through to the end of the flowering period.

The greatest enemy of the polyanthuses is the slug. Examine the leaves frequently for signs of nibbling, and put down Bug-Getta pellets to poison the culprits. Like the forget-me-nots, these plants enjoy dressings of weathered soot given every two weeks, at the rate of a heaping tablespoonful per plant. As the outer leaves age and become yellow, they should be stripped off close.

Aga Khan Losing Weight Worth $75 an Ounce

CAIRO (UP)—The plump for several days and is eating lightly—mostly such things as rice, stewed prunes and figs. A diet like this is certain to cause him to lose weight.

But the Aga Khan really doesn't care because he has all the money he could ever use.

Whenever the annual weighing in precious metals or gems comes around he customarily [illegible] the contributions back to his followers to be used for charitable and development work.

This is the 70th anniversary of his leadership of the Ismaili Moslems and tradition demands that he receive his weight in platinum.

Aga Khan is eating lightly these days even though every ounce he loses will be worth its weight in platinum soon.

The 78-year-old Moslem spiritual leader will leave for Pakistan at the end of this month to climb into a special chair scale and receive at least symbolically his weight in platinum.

His weight was last estimated at 202 pounds which makes him worth $181,800 at the current price of $75 an ounce for platinum.

Alfred Sheinwold's newest "Second Book of Bridge" (Sterling, $2.50) is all about play of the hand and doesn't take time out to discuss the bidding. But we have time to point out that while most South players would insist on playing the hand at spades, they would be wrong. With six solid tricks in spades, and no singleton or otherwise unbalanced distribution, South should be content to let North play for the nine-trick game which is ice cold against any defense.

In a book crammed with excellent deals to illustrate points of play, Freddie uses this one to illustrate the importance of the defender knocking out a vital entry before it can be used to advantage. Play the East cards with us.

Your partner opens the jack of diamonds. South wins this trick in his hand with the diamond king. He draws trumps in three leads. Then he leads a club, finessing dummy's jack and losing to your queen. What should you return? It is tempting to follow the old adage of "playing up to weakness" by leading a heart. If South has the king of hearts, your heart lead may establish a couple of heart tricks right away and then if you also get the ace of clubs you will defeat him. But you should not lead a heart. If you do, South will win the trick with the ace of hearts and lead another club. You will be able to cash one heart trick, but South will ruff the next heart and get to dummy with the ace of diamonds to discard a diamond on the established club suit. Your side will win only three tricks and South will make his contract.

Instead, you lead the queen of diamonds, to knock out North's ace before he can establish the clubs. Now when you win the next club lead with the ace you will be able to cash a diamond trick and South will be unable to get to dummy so he will sooner or later have to surrender a heart trick as well.

"My Most Valued Appliance"

That's the attitude of women who have had an opportunity to test the time, work and money-saving features of an automatic clothes dryer for themselves.

Here are some of their reasons:

SAVES WORK — "I can hardly believe that I've lugged my last basket of heavy, wet washing, that I'm through with all that stooping, bending, reaching and stretching."

SAVES IRONING — "I can fold my towels, sheets and corduroy clothes and put them away without ironing and other clothes come out of the dryer just right for ironing—no need to take time for re-dampening."

SAVES WORRY—"It's wonderful not to have to worry about the weather—or about my nice clean wash getting re-soiled by soot smudges, birds, children, dogs."

SAVES TIME — "Lightweight clothes are all ready for ironing 20 minutes after I put them in the dryer! Even heavy sheets and towels dry in 45 to 60 minutes."

SAVES MONEY — "Now I can wash my drapes, blankets, slip-covers, pillows and the children's stuffed toys at home, instead of sending them out."

SAVES CLOTHES — "We don't need nearly as many kiddies' clothes or as much linen now that I can get all the laundry washed, dried and ironed in a few hours."

AND—a dryer does all this for an average operating cost of about 5¢ a load.

Firm Not Registered

First Fine Levied Under BCHIS Plan

BURNABY (BUP)—William Ablitt, co-owner of the Auto Transport Co., here, was fined $75 yesterday for failing to register his company for payroll deductions under the new scheme of the British Columbia Hospital Insurance Commission.

Ablitt termed the BCHIS commission a "creeping bureaucracy" after hearing the judge's decision on the case.

The Auto Transport case was the first one of its kind since Health Minister Eric Martin announced his "get tough" policy regarding persons and companies not complying with the regulations.

"The hospital insurance legislation is oppressive to the individual because it is compulsory, and to the employer because it arbitrarily calls upon him to devote part of his time and facilities to the collection of what is simply a tax," Ablitt told the court.
